

Dear Editor

would like to express my anger and disgust with the personal attack on Libby Whelan in the recent issue of the X-Press. In the Doctor's words, he/she had shown everyone that violence is being promoted on our campus - certainly against Libby - he/she says and I quote "of course, we might throw snowballs at you" (referring to Libby)

This "Libby petition" as I understand it was initiated by a few concerned students and was signed by a number of concerned students. I was one of those signing... and I was not one issue of the paper alleged that it was circulated around the bar where everyone was drinking.

would like to express my apology to Libby on behalf of all the students who shared my anger last week. We (the students) have paid for this paper at the first of the year. I feel we are all responsible for what is happening with it.

As far as the Backlash issue goes, I would encourage you to make your formal complaints to the X-Press and Student Union - This means a written complaint.

As an elected student representative I am available to receive your complaints and I will be happy to pass them on to the appropriate persons. I will always stand up for what I believe in.

Signed
Madeline DeWolfe

Dear Editor;

We the students of Canadian Studies 222 Introduction to Womens Studies in Canada at the University of Prince Edward Island are writing this letter because of the current controversy surrounding the Backlash column in the X-Press, the University newspaper, and of course, Introduction to Womens Studies and Professor Vaughn Jeliffe, our instructor.

We are in this course to learn and to open our minds to debate and new ideas. We will understand one another and respect each others views with debate and new ideas and therefore have a better university.

Professor Vaughn Jeliffe challenges us and we respect and enjoy her classes which are original and fascinating.

This course should be mandatory for both men and women just like English 101.
