S'SIDE AID PRESENTS "PREVIEW FOR '62"

Fifty different feminine fashions will be presented this afternoon in Summerside by nine models at "Preview For 62," the annual fashion show and afternoon tea presented by the Ladies Aid of the Prince County Hospital, with spring fashions from the Barbara Ann Ltd. This social event will be held this afternoon from 3 to 5 p.m. in the auditorium of the Summerside Canadian Legion Home on Notre Dame Street, and the models include Miss Pauline Muttart, Miss Roberta Clark, Miss Brenda Brown, Miss Paula Morris, Miss Beverley Yeo, Mrs. Kenneth Judson, Mrs. Piers Burnham, Mrs. Henry Bishop, and Mrs. Garnet Ross. The fashions to be modelled will include costumes ranging from afternoon dresses, cotton dresses, suits, evening dresses, sportswear and formals. In the pictures above are, left to right, Miss Roberta Clark, in signs of spring which are apparent in this exciting spring weight wool. This smart light blue suit with its box jacket, small collar, and real pockets, is one of the many fine suites of spring. Paula Muttart, centre, is seen in a fully lined useful suit which will prove a versatile number for sping wearing. The chanel jacket is featured in this three-piece double knit wool in the bone shade. Paula Morris, right, is the model for this lovely rose suit with its chin-boy collar which follows the trend of this seasons styling. Fine wool crepe is used in this costume. Mrs. Garnet Ross wears a navy blue jacket dress of pure silk, the brief jacket with its detailed self trim is charmingly designed for figure flattery. Miss Brenda Brown is displaying an exciting red two piece suit of imported wool knit created in France for lansea.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Afternoon Sun Attempts To Shine Through Clouds

"Just think." Alex commented, smiling happily this afternoon over a small gift. "If she hadn't come home, I wouldn't have this!" "And," we said, "if the snowplow hadn't cleared the highway, she would still be in town!"

"There are a number of 'ifs' to it, aren't there?" Granddaughter smiled.

..But here she was, come home to us for the weekend, to make the little family in the house across the lane once more complete. She, it came to mind, would have cause to recall this homing in later years, since it was not the usual smart wheeling of minutes, she and the other students of our road came by, but by slower travelling occasioned by conditions left in the wake of the recent windblown March storm.

"And I remember of it," she will recount one day, if spared to share her recollections of this spring-trip, "we came from the Highway home by horse and sleigh. It was the afternoon was pleasant, the sun attempting to shine through a light veil of clouds. And there was more than a hint of softness in the air to denote that the springtime is here.

In the yards the storm had heaped the winter-drifts higher, having fashioned them by the winds' sculpturing, into spired and domes and intricate moulding which were quite beautiful to see. Not that, as we said, we could not well have done without this snowfall. But then doubtless the added moisture it will give, will help keep and encourage the crops through the growing season ahead. And as for the drifts, now with April's name on our lips in anticipated greeting, these will soon vanish.

Mack came by to catch his second breath after a spell of shoveling snow. He smiled as he reached out for slices of the fruit we were paring.

"It's a funny thing," he nodded, "but I always find apple best made ready for a pie more tasteful than when I eat it 'straight'! There's a nicer flavor to it."

"When she finishes that, she intends to make a cake," Alex observed, moving near. "Which would you rather have: the bowl to scrape, or the beaters"? He sighed with a show of resignation. "Just say. It makes no difference to me."

"The beaters," Mack grinned. We saw the furry black cat climb to the narrow top of a drift in the barnyard, "to view the landscape over," and the picture was a striking one: the inky dark of himself against the March-snow so white.

If Granddaughter had not come home. . .What a vast difference an "If" can make! Edna Jaques reflects on this in her verses, "If No One"

"If no one planted daffodils, or set out four o'clocks,
If no one sailed a golden ship, from grey old splintered docks
There'd be no gardens in the fall, or cargoes coming home at all.

If no one built an arching bridge, or laid a highway out;
And no one raised a little boy to laugh and run about,
How drab the street would be, how bare, without small children playing there.

If no one wrote a tender song, what would young lovers do
To tell each other all about, their love so fond and true?
For music has a loving way of voicing things we wish to say.

If no one built a little Church where worshippers could kneel
And pour their troubles out in prayer, their broken hearts to heal,
How lonely life would be without these little Churches all about!

I am so glad that people still keep in their hearts' deep core a love of all things pure and good, of life's abundant store-Honour, and faith, and budding flowers, to help us in our darkest hours."

Until Monday — — Diary— Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Nonmarrying Deadbeat Is Widow's Pet Peeve

Dear Mary Hayworth: Hurray for your perceptive answers to the selfish males who want women's interest and affection, with no strings attached.

I refer to the bachelor, 43, who is distrait because his neglected sweetheart finally married someone else, and the widower, around 70, who can't understand why women friends drop him when they learn he doesn't intend to marry again.

In holding up a mirror to their scrounging attitude of asking something for nothing in the field of human attachments, you've enabled us all to see them more clearly.

Any widow or spinster who would countenance such purely time-killing attentions for any length of time ought to have her head examined.

As you say, a man's resolve not to marry— or, if a widower, not to marry again — morally disqualifies him to court a woman's interest on a tete- a- tete basis. He should enlist in group activities instead.

May I (a widow) point out another type of deadbeat in the courting game, namely, the man who accepts drinks, dinners, theater tickets, etc., at the woman's expense without equivalent recompense; while also exploiting her social affiliations to promote himself with her friends. He is incapable of caring for anyone, in his greed for ease and social position.

Widows (or spinsters) who tolerate that sort of thing not only waste themselves but actually foster the man's ego-sickness. It is unfair to all concerned to give him currency in social circles where he is simply on the lookout for foolish women to keep him amused at no cost to himself.— — E.G.

Dear Mary Haworth: I don't know about widowers, but God help the woman who marries a bachelor, especially after they hit 40. I speak from experience, having married one five years ago — which I shall regret until the day I die (or hit the divorce court).

The honeymoon was over in six months. Then he stopped calling to say he'd be late and started to work late more and more often and frequently on weekends. He loves his job, not me, his good clothes, smiles and conversation are for the office, where he is known as a swell fellow.

I live in silence except for the sound of TV football games and cowboy movies. We have shared an office joke since I married him. If I ask "How were things today?" he answers "Why?" I get no gifts for birthday or Christmas and we have no tree— such things are "corny" for him.

As for sex, I can't figure whether he's too old or too tired. He doesn't want children; or furniture; or anything to tie him down. He is a social misfit like the bachelor and widower who wrote you recently. Such men shouldn't marry; as a favor to women, they should stay single.

If and when they do condescend to marry, the wife pays and pays and pays. If this type lived with another man, he'd at least have to help keep the bathroom clean, bring home groceries once in a while and speak civilly at all times.— — K.P.

Dear Correspondents: Let's not fault the men entirely for these disillusionments. The luckless women should take some blame for getting involved with him.

Haven't you noticed that women with a talent for living full happy lives seem instinctively to side step the wrong sort of man? Whereas women with a fatalistic affinity for disappointment seem to gravitate to dead beat males. (Or maybe they arrive at them by passive drifting).

Correct your behavior pattern, instead of blaming others, when you find yourself coping with regrettable results of past encounters.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

District Convention Plans Discussed By WI Group

Miss Miriam Dollar was hostess to the members of the Springvale WI on Tuesday evening, March 13, for their regular monthly meeting. The president, Mrs. Lester Johnstone, chaired the meeting, which opened with the Institute Ode and Mary Stewart Collect.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and roll call was answered by nine members and four visitors.

The secretary reported a balance of $46.38 from the cake sale held recently and that $5 had been sent to the Musical Festival Association for membership.

The sick and school committee reports were heard and correspondence consisted of a letter from the cancer society and the annual report from the .Red Cross.

A questionnaire on education was received from Mrs. Edwin Cook, provincial education convener and this was given to Mrs. Lester Johnstone to be filled out.

Plans were made for the district convention.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Crabbe and members of the lunch committee for the meeting are Mrs. Bruce Stuart, Mrs. Austin Sentner and Mrs. Ivan Sentner.

Following adjournment of the meeting lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

CHURCHILL W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Churchill WMS was held at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. Robert MacKinnon on Wednesday evening, March 16. The theme of this meeting was "Called By A New Name. Sons" it was opened with the call to worship and prayer.

Mrs. Garfield MacFadyen read the scripture and the exposition on the theme was given by Mrs. Robert MacKinnon. Mrs. Richard MacPhee led in prayer.

The bible study was led by Mrs. Charles Frizzell.

Roll call was answered by 13 members and two visitors and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer led by Mrs. Duncan Gass.

Lunch was served by the hostess and the committee in charge. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Louis Darrach.

CORNWALL UCW

The March meeting of the Cornwall United Church Women was held at the home of Mrs. Stewart Drake and Mrs. Margaret Drake recently. Mrs. Walter Boyle was in charge of the worship service the theme of which was "What Is the Church." Mrs. I Walls read the scripture and the prayer was led by Mrs. Boyle.

Mrs. Walls was in charge of the study book: and the meeting divided into groups to discuss the questions "why attend church", "what keeps a local church alive" and "Is it a fact that our church is talking only to itself," as well as a number of others.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Stanley Willis read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs. Watson Livingston is in charge of the worship for the next meeting and Mrs. Lawson Drake and Mrs. Sterling Clow, the study book.

A donation from Mrs. Alley MacLean was gratefully received by the organizations. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Gregor.

PALMERS ROAL C.W.I.

The monthly meeting of the Palmer's Road Parish Council of CWI, was held in the church vestry. Thirty-two members attended the meeting, which was opened with a prayer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and the financial statement presented. The financial report showed that $216 had been obtained from bingos and card parties held in the various districts.

The group voted $100 be sent to the Prince County Welfare and $75 to the scholarship fund. Twelve dollars was sent for membership fees,

Several letters were read and discussed, and the press convenor was asked to write the CBC regarding shock tactics.

Two members handed in knitting for the Red Cross. Rev. Father Walsh, spiritual director, addressed the group and the meeting closed with prayer.

Mid-Morning Tea Party Features Many Goodies

The heavy polished golden oak door swung wide open and in the doorway stood our smiling host, Mr. William A. Baxter, benevolent with the years, active, rosy-cheeked, smartly tailored, dapper with a red silk handkerchief tucked in his coat pocket and, incidentally, Chairman of the Board.

"Come in. It's a cool morning, just right for tea." he invited.

TEA PARTY

Any kind of morning would have been right for this tea party, set in a luxurious parlor, an open fire on the hearth, really comfortable chairs with covers of the Gordon tartan, a small table beside each.

The tea equipment stood in a sunny bay window—a shining golden tea-trolley with a big pot of fresh-brewed tea covered with a knitted "tea cozy", a swinging kettle of hot water, milk, sugar tablets and lemon slices "because many Americans like them."

The accompanying goodies were fabulous, and arranged on three-tier trays for easy passing.

BAKED BY NEIGHBOR

"A neighbor baked them, as my wife isn't well," explained our host.

They included light - as - a - feather scones with an assortment of raspberry. strawberry, blackberry, blueberry, bramble, gooseberry and other jams.

"These jams are really gems," chuckled the Chef, smacking his lips.

"They are now sold worldwide and are still made in our plant today in small batches," said Mr. Baxter, "much as when my wife first made them and I was the salesman, when we started this business near the turn of the century.

FLAVORS RETAINED

"We believed, and have proved, that the finest homemade flavors can be retained in processed foods by proper care and using the best ingredients."

Other goodies included a layer pound cake put together with jam; chocolate-covered cookies; oatcakes; Queen's cakes (butter sponge); Scottish shortbread. Recipes for them all will be given eventually in this column.

Measurements level; recipes for 6.

SCOTTISH SHORT BREAD

1½ c. sifted flour
½ tsp. salt
½ c. cornstarch
1-3 tsp. ground nutmeg
1 c. firm butter
½ c. granulated sugar

Sift flour, salt, cornstarch and nutmeg together twice.

Chop in butter with pastry blender until well-mixed; work in sugar with spoon, knead with hands, if necessary) until dough is fine and smooth.

Press into 9' pie-plate.

If desired, strew with tiny "hundreds and thousands" (decorettes) or fine-chopped nuts.

Bake in slow oven, 325 deg. to 350 deg. F., from 35 to 45 min. or until firm and brown.

Cut in small wedges. Cool.

SUNDAY DINNER

Tossed Celery-Pickle Slices
Lettuce Saladettes
Roast Boned Shoulder of Pork with Sage Stuffing
Pan-Roasted Peeled Potatoes
Buttered Diced Rutabaga
Lemon Sherbet
Strawberry Jam Topping
Coffee Milk

It was good news that handsome Mrs. William Baxter, (Vice-Chairman of the Board) confided to her room, was feeling well enough to see me.

"Your house is restfully quiet," I remarked, "yet many persons come in and out. There's always a slamming door!"

"I was formerly a trained nurse and had to devise something to prevent this," Mrs. Baxter explained. "So I thought up door-buffers.

"So easy to make! Just stuff old socks with cotton or cut-up old wool. Sew them up decoratively with yarn, tie on a handle of braided yarn about 22 inches long and hang the buffer over both sides of the door knob."

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Tomato Juice
Escalloped Finnan Haddie or Haddock Fillets
Whipped Potato
Kale or Other Greens
Lemon Meringue Pie or Spiced Canned Pears
Coffee Tea Milk

THE CHEF ESCALLOPS FINNAN HADDIE OR HADDOCK Fillets

1½ lbs. finnan haddie (or use fresh or frozen haddock fillets)
2 c. hot medium-thick white sauce
1 minced pimiento
1 chopped hard-cooked egg
¼ tsp. paprika
1 tbsp. minced parsley
1 tsp. lemon juice
¼ c. fine dry bread crumbs
1½ tbsp. melted butter or margarine

Simmer fish with hot water. Simmer 5 min. Drain.

Remove any skin and bones; flake fish coarse.

Add to hot white sauce with the next 5 ingredients. Top with crumbs stirred with melted butter.

Bake 30 min. in mod. oven, 350 deg F., or until lightly browned.

QCHS Home Ec Department Presents Display Of Fashion

On Thursday evening the home economics department of Queen Charlotte High School presented their annual display and program in the high school auditorium.

The program entitled "fashions, out of this world" was based on a visit to another planet "tenalpia" by a group of earth children from QCHS. The earth children put on five separate fashion shows, one by each of the grade nine classes at the school and a number of special numbers for the "tenalpian" children.

The welcome to the parents and friends attending the show was given by Cheryl Jenkins and comments on "tenalpia" outlining the theme of the program were given by Wendy Phillips.

In the fashion shows held by each of the grade nine classes, the girls modelled the dresses, suits, skirts or pyjamas that they had made during the year in their home ec. class.

The first special number on the program was a welcome song by the "tenalpian" children in their native language and a solo by earth girl Julie Foster.

A number of dances including "steps by star-light" by the "tenalpian" children and a Swiss dance and an Italian dance by the earth children were also included in the program.

The grade eight home economics class presented a skit entitled "the case of the delinquent Home Ec'ers" and a discussion on the topic "what is home economics" rounded out the evening's program.

The work of the manual training classes at the school was also on display.

At the close of the evening's program the students presented Mrs. Alta Acorn, and Mrs. Richard Matheson, the school's home economics teachers and Mr. Royston Mugford, ARCO, the music instructor at the school, with gifts in appreciation of their work with the students throughout the year.

MODEL

Miss Gail Cameron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.H. Cameron, Crestwood Drive Extension in Charlottetown, is one of the models that will be appearing in the Prince Edward Island Hospital's Junior Ladies Aid Fashion Show on April 9, 10 and 11.

WELLINGTON

A meeting of the United Church Ladies Aid was held recently at the home of Mrs. Keith MacDonald. The study period was followed by a prayer. Mrs. Charles Allen was organist. March meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Earle Enman. It was reported that Mrs. Ernest Allen had attended the Presbyterial meeting of United Church Women held recently in Charlottetown.

Roll call was answered by six members and four visitors were present. Collection was taken and a donation was received from a friend. Lunch was served.

Rep. W.B. MacPhail procured literature on the new United Church Women group and books were passed around to members. Meeting closed with a hymn and benediction.

The many friends and relatives of Mr. Alphonse Counells, Kensington, will regret to learn he is a patient in Prince County Hospital where he underwent an operation recently.

Mr. Edward Arsenault recently made a business trip to Ontario.

Mr. Eldon Barlow recently spent some time in Wellington.

Miss Bonita Henderson spent the weekend with her parents in Elmsdale.

Miss Sharon Crozier returned to Charlottetown to resume her studies at Prince of Wales College after spending the weekend in Baltic the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crozier.

BALTIC

The assembly parlor of the Kensington United Church was the scene of a delightful spring tea on Saturday afternoon, March 17th, sponsored by the Malpeque Road Group of the United Church Women's Organization.

The tea tables were adorned with bouquets of green and white flowers, and other many pretty spring touches added to the season's atmosphere.

Mrs. Alexander McKay welcomed the many visitors from other districts and after all were seated at their tables grace was said by Mrs. McKay.

Mrs. Earle Murdoch and Mrs. McKay poured the tea, while the members assisted in serving the guests. Piano selections by Rev. L. M. Murray were much enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Golding Reeves of Summerside were weekend visitors to Baltic the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Caseley.
