

Royals Come From Behind To Defeat Pope Aces 8-3

SUMMERSIDE — A four goal second period and a three goal third brought Charlotte-Royals to an uphill, 8-3, whipping of Summerside Pope Motor Aces in an Island Intermediate Hockey League game here last night.

The locals looked like a new team for half of the hockey game, and coach Tim MacQuigan had them hustling, but the visitors creased the netting much too often in the last 30 minutes to let Summerside stay in the ball game.

After tying, 1-1, following the initial period, and holding a 2-1 lead midway in the middle frame, the roof fell in on the Aces. Four goals by Charlotte-Royals put them ahead to stay, 4-2, after two frames.

In the finale, Sandy's Royals had a 3-1 edge in scoring. Donnie Frizzell had the busier night in the cage as he blocked 36 of the 39 shots aimed his way. Gerard Smith topped 20 of the 37 directed to his goal-mouth. With Albie Flanagan out of the Royals lineup, linemate Angle Carroll took over and set up three goals. Gordie Whitlock and Stan Reardon each had a brace, while single markers were scored by Daryl Doyle, Don Chandler, Dave Lawlor, and Mike MacKinnon.

Pope Motor Aces were led by Rich Gallant who fired home a pair of goals. Team captain Gerald Smith got the Aces off to good things in the first period with his initial marker of the campaign.

Next game is on Wednesday between the same Aces and Borden Legion Nationals, with game time set at 9:15 p.m.

What Gives With Les Canadiens?

By KEN MACPHEAL

Perhaps it's a bit too early in the season to start tolling the death knell over the Montreal Canadiens, but unless they come alive very soon, people will be doing just that. With every inept, swipe of their sticks, they're digging their grave a little deeper, and unless they start exhibiting a little of the fire of which they are capable, most of the other teams are simply going to write R.I.P. over them, and walk away.

We wonder, as does everyone else, what has come over the team which was supposed to have been head and shoulders above the rest of the league. Is it just that? Because of being overrated, are they overconfident? Not at this stage surely. Is it because of injuries? Since when do Les Canadiens go into a lull due to a few broken bones? There are a couple of the causes which float to the surface whenever any fine team goes into a skid. But the real reason, we think, goes a bit deeper. Mind you, if it was any team other than Montreal we were speaking of, it wouldn't be hard to blame the Canadiens' strategy.

Coch Hector (Toe) Blake, 54, has been playing and coaching the game of hockey since the year 1924. That's a long time. In that time he has proven himself to be, besides a tremendous player, one of the best. If not the best, big time hockey coaches in history. His record has been fabulous. And even though he led his team to the Stanley Cup only last year, it is quite possible that finally his date of departure is closing in on him.

Everyone, at one time or another, reaches the peak of his prowess in his given trade, and from then on, gravity takes over. Maybe he's lost the knack of getting through to his players, or maybe he's become psychologically wrong. But something is definitely psychologically wrong, and any new blood that is waiting in the wings, be it either player or coach, had better lace his skates tightly and make ready.

SELBY AND CANUCKS MIX WELL

When Brit Selby, last year's Calder cup winner as the rookie of the year, was demoted to the Vancouver Canucks of the western league, more than a few eyebrows were lifted, ours included.

Selby, it appeared, was suffering from what some people call the sophomore lull. But it seems to us that he hasn't given enough time to work himself out of it. Surely a young man who shows enough promise to be selected as the best newcomer to the National League in one year, should be allowed until Christmas of his second year to prove himself worthy of the award.

Of course, no one is denying the fact that the old geezers who make up the nucleus of the Toronto team have been flying around like the Demons of Eden were on their heels, and perhaps, with Selby not showing well enough, Imbach decided that the only way Brit was going to get ice time and not go stale, was to ship him to the minors.

In a nutshell, the whole trouble was that Imbach had too many old-timers performing remarkably, and if anyone was to be dropped, it should be someone with the youth and resilience to jump back up on the wagon, without any hurt feelings, and the youthful spirit to try all the harder the next time.

Selby himself is quite philosophical about the whole thing. "There wasn't anything else I could do but send me out," Selby said. "I knew it was coming. I tried, but I just didn't seem to be able to do anything about it," he stated.

Bert Olmstead, on the other hand, is elated. Faced with player revolts, inner disturbances and what not, the Canucks coach was only too happy to receive into his fold, one with such talent as the Calder winner. Selby replied by scoring a goal in his first game after getting off the plane, and he's been flying ever since. It won't be too long before he's back with the parent club.

THIS AND THAT

Charlottetown's Vern Handrahan, now pitching winter baseball in the Puerto Rican League has struck out 23 men while working 26 innings. His record as of November 23 was a losing 2-3, but his ERA ranked sixth best in the league with a sparkling 1.55. Did you know that in the voting for the National Baseball League's most valuable player, that one not actually named Sandy Kousser III? You'll remember that Roberto Clemente was the winner, and nobody can deny his worth to Pittsburgh. But for a supposedly knowledgeable man to rank 10 ball players more valuable to his team than Kousser was to the Dodgers is like saying Eve wasn't valuable to Adam, or vice versa. . . . Latest word on Jamie Kennedy's exploits with the Sherbrooke Braves is that he has a total of 29 scoring points, which is tops on his club, and is 4th in the overall league scoring race. This information, by the way, comes right from the source, so to speak. . . . We received in the mail today a newspaper from Toronto sent to us by a former Islander Morgan MacKay, Mr. MacKay, attending the harness races at Newmarket raceway, had a lunch and bet $10 on the tractor. The horse came in, one of which was a 15-1 longshot. The payoff for each ticket was $150.00. Congratulations to Mr. MacKay. . . . In all fairness to our friend, Vic, he is known that he was only one goal out in his prediction of the other night's game too. But he was in favor of a Montreal victory. God . . .

THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY

This was the scene last night at the opening of the greatest show on earth for the children from Parkdale-Sherwood, the Ice Sports night. Believe it or not, these fans were not watching the close finish of a race; merely the contestants lining up for event number one. Only adults with hardened ear drums (parents, teachers) could tough it out with the exuberant tots. The staff photographer retreated as the speedsters in race one came barreling around the second corner.

Brewer Cleared By NHL To Play With Nationals

MONTREAL (CP) — Whether or not Carl Brewer plays hockey for Canada's National team this season is a decision that now rests solely with the player.

Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said Friday that all procedural problems associated with amendments to the league's bylaws have been cleared up and that Brewer—a former all-star defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs—has been notified he now is eligible to apply for reinstatement to amateur ranks.

Campbell said the American and Western Hockey Leagues have also ratified the revised procedure.

Friday's decision now clears the way for Brewer to be placed on the voluntarily retired list, the only roster from which he can seek reinstatement.

Brewer, 28, ended a seven-year career with the Leafs at the start of the 1965 training camp at Peterborough, Ont. He walked out after a dispute with club officials and has remained out of hockey since. He used the year's absence to complete a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Toronto.

WAS AN ALL-STAR

During his stint with the Leafs, Brewer was selected to three all-star teams. He made the first squad for his play in the 1962-63 season and was selected to the second team one year earlier and again in 1964-65.

Campbell said the new procedure applies only to players who are of NHL playing calibre as evidence "by having played in their last year of active competition only with an NHL member club."

To be eligible for voluntary reinstatement and free from the necessity of being waived out of the NHL, several stipulations are laid down.

"The applicant must not have participated in any professional game—either league or playoff—for one complete season immediately prior to his request for reinstatement," Campbell said.

While with the Leafs, Brewer appeared in 453 regular season games, scoring 19 goals and assisting in 131 others. He amassed 915 penalty minutes during that time and led the league in that department twice.

Mount "A" Wins 6-4 In Overtime

SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP) — Dave Richardson scored two goals, including the overtime winner, as Mount Allison University Hawks defeated University of New Brunswick Red Devils 6-4 Friday night in a Maritime Intercollegiate Hockey League fixture.

Richardson's winner came at 3:25 in overtime on a power play while Gary Jones was in the penalty box.

Gord McKay, Don Atkinson, Bill Small and Gerry Barlett were the other Mount Alliston scorers.

Ian Lutes, Austin Duquette, Jim Grant and Ron Loughery sank the UNB goals.

WOLFVILLE N.S. (CP) — Acadia University Axemen defeated St. Thomas Tommies 5-3 in a Maritime Intercollegiate Hockey League game here Friday night.

Goalkeeper led Acadia with John Reid, B. Grites and E. Sheppers were the other Acadia goal scorers.

Lordon Doucet and Harquel netted one each for St. Thomas.

HUNTERS' CORNER

Goose Season Ends In Disappointment

The year 1966 has entered on its last lap and cherub 1967 is standing by, ready to take over. The year will go down on the records of waterfowl hunters as the disappointment of the century — our black ducks, never before in the history of this province, have reached such a low ebb in numbers. Whether they will ever regain their former plenitude in numbers is a sixtivity dollar question. Of a certainty this columnist never expects to witness such a comeback.

22 MENACE

The 22 calibre rifle is under fire this season with respect to its use as a hunting weapon. Several near-fatalities have been reported. In one instance two geese hunters in their blind had to kiss the ground when 22 cal slugs started smacking amid their stool of decoys. The hunters were lucky — they had dug a shallow hole in the ground so as not to be conspicuous if a flock of geese came into their "rig" — and it sure came in handy. The fishermen should have known that real, live wildgeese wouldn't sit quiet under such a barrage but would have gotten airborne at the first bullet whine. Both were juveniles and had no legal right to hunt unless in company with a parent or guardian. They still persisted in placing a few more shots to one side of the blind about fifteen or twenty yards from the "rig". Several other hunters have reported near misses from 22 cal bullets and a 22 cal kill one as quickly as a 12-inch shell if it hits in the right spot. Possibly the nearest miss of all occurred a few years ago. A couple of young men were out for a stroll one Sunday afternoon and sat down at the edge of a wood for a breather. Suddenly there was the crack of a rifle and one fell a tag at his belt line. When he stood up he knew the cause — his belt had been neatly cut by a 22 cal bullet.

FIRST SIGHTING

The first flock of wildgeese to visit Pownal Bay came about a week ago — approximately 70 in number. About one half hour later someone opened up with an army rifle on the Cherry Valley shore. It was a .308 calibre weapon as the empties indicated. There were geese all over the skyline. The flock moved to Orwell Cove area off Donald John MacKenzie's shore. The first night in their new abode they came ashore on MacKenzie's Point — Donald John's really — and ran into a night shooter's barrage. By the volume of fire it was thought there were at least four hunters in the party. Lights were used in this instance — powerful searchlights and the flock got a badmouthing. Several dead and wounded geese were picked up in the area the following morning. This flock, or what was left of it, were reported at Flat River the following day and left for parts unknown within a few hours. A party of Murray Harbour hunters have been suspected of such actions a year ago but then again a Charlottetown trio are also thought to be addicted to such hunting tactics. All signs point to the cold, hard fact — that hunting for sport has only a few years left before becoming a memory only.

This columnist was somewhat amused over certain comments about this column from a veteran hunter from Borden who stated that there were approximately fifteen hundred geese at Bras Harbour in West Prince County, one thousand in Bedeque Bay, three thousand at St. Peter's Island and another two thousand in New London Bay. Seven thousand, five hundred geese almost under foot and yet he apparently is afraid of a cut in bag limit or a closed season. His tone is so familiar I feel that we have met before — in the early 1950's, in fact. Apparently he only counted the hundreds and left the odd numbers alone.
