WITCHING FOR WATER.

A SUGGESTED EXPLANATION OF THE DIVINING ROD.

The New York Experiment Station on Its Reported Virtues—An Interesting Article of a Scientifically Farming Turn—The Conclusion Reached.

In the Practical Farmer of Philadelphia, there appeared an article with the following title: "Witching for Water. Is there anything in it?"

I am of opinion that there is.

It would appear that a belief so persistent as that in the efficacy of the divining rod, which has existed for centuries, and is at the present day firmly held by many persons of more than ordinary intelligence, which is moreover (unless authentic testimony be wholly disregarded) confirmed by practical results so often repeated as to forbid the hypothesis of mere coincidence, is worthy of consideration, and ought not to be set aside as simply a delusion. While this belief has existed in many forms, and at the present is, by different individuals, and in different sections, held under widely-differing modifications, there appears to be a common ground of agreement, which regarding may enable us to reach an explanation of the reported virtues of the divining rod.

First it will be observed that the character of the rod itself, its material substance, its form, and the manner of holding it, varies widely, some insisting that it must be a forked branch of hazel, apple or peach. Each of these has its earnest advocates, while the more liberal minded grant that a branch of any tree bearing stone fruit will serve the purpose; others still regard a flexible steel or iron rod as superior to any other.

By some it is regarded as equally effective for locating water or veins of mineral deposits, while others regarding it as valueless for one of these purposes, insist stoutly in regarding it as of inestimable value for the other, and generally we find its virtues extolled in different sections for the supposed ability it has to reveal that which is mainly desired by the inhabitants.

I am not aware that the following explanation has been urged, and yet it seems to me so obvious that it must have occurred to many who have sought to account for some substantial reason for a belief so persistently and so widely held.

It is of course well known that one of the most common sources of the precious and other metals is in veins traversing the rocks, and which are often found charged with workable ores probably deposited along with the other matters constituting the vein. It is also well known that generally, if not indeed always, these veins are not only different in composition from the country rock in which they are found, but either harder or softer than the adjacent rock, and therefore in the atmospheric action upon such rocks, the weathering, as it is termed, results in causing an elevation or depression along the course of the vein, which often is quite marked.

It is also not uncommon for underground streams of water to run or percolate such veins as have suffered from such weathering action, and often remarkable mineral changes are known to have resulted in the character of the compounds found present in such veins.

Any one carrying a divining rod of either of the many kinds recommended, will find it a very difficult, and practically an impossible thing, to carry it over a territory such as I have described, without observing it now and then being deflected to the one side or another, according as during his advance one foot or the other may strike upon an elevation, or in a depression, so slight often as to have quite escaped observation, and it may be that these perfectly natural results have so often occurred as to have established this belief in the virtues of the rod itself.

Many years ago I met a cultivated and intelligent mining engineer in one of our western mining districts, who, with all his general intelligence, was a firm believer in the divining rod, and used it also with marked success in pointing out new veins of ore. After a short course of observation, I became convinced that in this particular case the above explanation was ample, and to my friend's surprise he found that I, too, possessed this power, since in my hands also the rod turned as readily as in his own and, as he declared, as truthfully.

It would naturally happen that any local inequality on the surface would not likely be again struck in one's walk about, so that as a rule the existence of a change of level more or less continuous, such as a vein might cause, would soon reveal itself to one traversing it at intervals.—Peter Collier, in Country Gentleman.

America's Dead Sea.

Medical Lake, so called on account of the remedial virtues of its waters, situated on the great Columbian plateau, in Southern Washington, at an altitude of 2,300 feet above the level of the Pacific, is the Dead Sea of America. It is about a mile long and from a half to three-fourths of a mile in width, and with a maximum depth of about 60 feet. The composition of the waters of this Alpine lake is almost identical with that of the Dead Sea of Palestine, and, like its Oriental counterpart, no plant has yet been found growing in or near its edges. It is all but devoid of animal life, a species of large "boat bug," a queer little terrapin and the famous "walking fish" being its only inhabitants. This walking fish is an oddity really deserving of special note. It is from eight to nine inches long and has a finny membrane extending from head to head, even around both the upper and lower surface of the tail. It is provided with four legs, those before having four toes, the hinder five.—San Francisco Examiner.

M. COQUELIN.
The Great French Comedian.

These are the features of the Prince of French Comedians, whose "Tartuffe," which he may be said to have made his own, convulses every audience which has the delight of seeing the master portray the arch hypocrite. Respecting "Vin Mariani," he says: "Strange to say that 'Vin Mariani,' so exquisite a wine, should also be a remedy, and a delicious one at that, so pleasant to the taste and so beneficial to the entire system." And Coquelin merely states a truth which is attested by the most famous men and women of the age, by the foremost medical men, and the managers of all the great hospitals. "Vin Mariani" is indeed beneficial to the system. The weakest can digest it; the most debilitated are benefited by it; the most hopeless are revivified by it; and as has been often said regarding it, "It gives new life and hope." "Vin Mariani" is the great tonic-stimulant of the age, used by the great brain workers of the world, who find that, exhausted by overwork, it refreshes, strengthens, and builds up the whole system. An album of portraits of many celebrities who have spoken highly of "Vin Mariani" will be sent to those who send their address to Lawrence A. Wilson & Co., Montreal, the Canadian Agents.

MURRAY HARBOR SOUTH TEA MEETING.

The tea meeting, as advertised by the Public Hall Co., came off in the hall on Wednesday last, the 16th inst. The weather and roads were all that could be desired. An immense crowd took advantage of the day. The hall was packed to its utmost capacity. A very enjoyable time was spent. It was found that after all had taken tea, a large quantity of the dainties were left over. So the ladies in charge decided to give a social on the following evening, which was a grand success in every particular. The admission for the social was, adults 10 cents, children 5 cents. The proceeds of which amounted to $150, by which the hall is freed from debt, and a surplus of $70 left on hand. The ladies in charge deserve great praise for their untiring efforts. Although the tea was under the management of the directors, the success of it is entirely due to the ladies. It is currently reported that never was such a pleasant time spent at any public gathering held in the place before. The public are also very thankful to those who supplied the music for the occasion. The performance of Miss Ina Roberts on the tambourine has been a source of pleasant comment ever since. Indeed, there is another name we cannot overlook, viz., the invincible A. J. McInnis, of Murray River, who rendered fine music on the violin and also gave two or three vocal solos, to the enjoyment of all present. The entertainment came to a close by the audience singing "God Save the Queen." Your correspondent hopes that the good people of Murray Harbor may meet with that success that they deserve, that they may always have such a good jolly band of ladies to attend their public teas.

MILTON NOTES.

The guild in connection with St. John's Church is the life and light of fair Milton. It is an honorable society and well worthy of its origin. Its members are numerous and pushing, making Wednesday evening, the one of meeting, an evening of enjoyment. It would be impossible to say too much of such an assembly of young folk. It is not only a place of enjoyment, but also a place of culture. Lively times are experienced very often while the programme is being carried out, which consists of dialogues, recitations, readings and music, with some occasional remarks. The guild meets in the Orange Hall at North Milton, where its members intend giving a concert in the near future.

Miss Lena Horne, of Charlottetown, is at present visiting friends here.

Mr. William Coles, Sr., of this place, met with a very painful accident on Friday last. He was working in his mill, and while engaged sawing a log his right hand came in contact with the saw, lacerating the middle finger so badly that amputation was necessary.

The ladies of Milton parish have organized a sewing circle. Their first place of meeting is at the Rectory, where they will spend a short time in a social chat about the rules and regulations of the circle, and then earnest work. No doubt we shall see an advertisement next summer headed "Milton Fair."

A very enjoyable evening was spent last week at the residence of Mr. John Coles. Some few of the ladies and gentlemen of Milton and the city collected, and thoroughly enjoyed some harmless games. The genial hostess then treated the company to a cup of delicious coffee, after which they dispersed, well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 21.—The Journal of Commerce asserts that two of the leading steamship companies running ships between Liverpool and New York are negotiating with a view of concluding a working arrangement in connection with Southampton steamers. It is stated the arrangements will go into effect in the spring.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Standard says: "Unless the Hawaiians show more spirit than in the last two years, that country is certain to share the fate of the short-lived Texan republic, if the American constitution can be stretched far enough to permit possessions beyond the sea."

The Daily News says: "Despite Mr. Cleveland the new party in Hawaii still believe they have the United States at their back. We do not wonder some persons in the States think the whole thing a shameful scandal and fear for their own liberties if such outrages can be carried out under the guns of ships flying the American flag."

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A despatch from Yokohama announces the arrival of the steamship Empress of India, adding: "Hawaiian minister, S. M. Damon, sends a message reporting the royalist revolt, which had been finally suppressed. Communication among the islands is finally restored."

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—Rev. Dr. Shaw, speaking of the missionary troubles in Japan, said that work would certainly be maintained. In Japan the Methodists have 77 preaching places, 1,981 communicants 2,154 Sabbath school scholars.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A special from Oaxaco, Mex., says: "Mexicans living on the Guatemala side of the border are being subjected to such outrageous treatment at the hands of native Guatemalans that they are crossing over into Mexico by the thousands and seeking military protection. Mexican military forts along the border are strengthened daily and active preparations for the war, which is believed to be inevitable, continue to be made. Several ranches alleged to be on the Mexican side of the border have been attacked and murders committed by roving bands of Guatemalans. The feeling against the latter is very bitter among the Mexicans.
