Dumville and Blair Phillip, son of Phillip and the late Mrs. Thompson, both of O'Leary. The winsome bride looked lovely in a waltz length wedding dress of figured white nylon organza over lace, with pink and white accessories and carried a nosegay of pink carnations. Prior to her marriage the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward MacDonald. After the guests had assembled, the bride to be was escorted to a nicely decorated seat of honor by her sister, Mrs. Alvin Yeo. Miss Betty Phillips played the wedding march. The many lovely gifts were opened by Mrs. Ross Tuplin and Mrs. Keith Gorriel. The names and good wishes were read by Mrs. Hazel MacIsaac. After the gifts were presented Audrey graciously thanked all for their lovely gifts and good wishes and invited all to visit them in their home in Charlottetown. ELLEN'S DIARY

Demijohn And Cuspidor What Became Of Them?

"I don't see why it has to rain today" one of the children commented before school this morning watching a shower wash down the pines. "Why, to brighten the pastures" James smiled. "And settle the dust" we added remembering the sight of it rising of late after any traffic on this road of ours to be a hazard to every passer-by. "But the weather has been so nice" the small one offered with a sigh. "We'd never get the cellar tidied" James twinkled, "if we did not have a rainy day!" So that was the farmers' endeavour today, tidying the cellar of this house to receive its required autumn storings. It is a roomy place, walled with blocks of dressed island stone and has a convenient ground entrance, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Bob Johnson, in St. Catharines, Ontario. Mrs. Edwin Dommersmouth of Hanover, N.J. has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Heckbert, Summerside. "A cuspidor!" the other exclaimed, "what in time was that?" "And you don't know?" James queried. "Never heard of it before!... What queer names there were in the long ago" he smiled. "I'm glad I was born too late for them!" Now that we grow no potatoes, the cellar is a place of mixed storings. "We'll have a nice few mauls—it will take some room for them" James said at the outset of the chore, and there'll be the furnace wood. "Yes," the younger farmer nodded. "Reckon we'll perhaps have to move out those cart-wheels. And that old driving-wagon, what will we do with that?" "Do with it!" James exclaimed, "why we'll have to store it somewhere else. And it's not old... your mother and I are going to take a ride in it one of these times" he grinned boyishly "aren't we, Ellen?" "We sho' are!" we chuckled. "Not tonight, however. Our cellar is tidy but showers patter on this roof-top. "We just may get a spell of weather like this, Ellen", James says, coming in, shoulders a bit damp, at his busy day's end. "Until tomorrow — — — Diary Good-night."

LONG AGO
O gardens old of long ago!
O drowsy winds awake and blow
Your fragrant blossoms back to me.
And all the joys that used to be.
Blow back the laughter of those days,
When childish feet trod grassy ways
Where buttercups and daisies grew
Beneath a sky forever blue.
Blow back the songs we used to know,
The old sweet songs of long ago;
Blow back the youthful dreams we knew,
The tender love so deep and true.
Blow back the carefree happy hours
And all the fragrance of the flowers;
O drowsy winds awake and blow—
Blow back the peace of long ago.
—Constance I. Heckbert, Summerside.
