Smallwood Says He's Delighted With Make-up of Commission

By GERALD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A beaming Premier Smallwood groped for superlatives Friday to express his delight at the choice of members for the royal commission to review Newfoundland's financial Terms of Union with Canada.

Work of the commission, whose appointment was announced in the Commons Friday by Prime Minister St. Laurent, would be "of absolutely terrific importance to Newfoundland," Mr. Smallwood told a press conference.

The future of Newfoundland's "standards and levels of services will be determined by the recommendations of the commission," he said. It would recommend "the form and scale" of additional financial assistance.

Commission chairman John McNair, chief justice and former premier of New Brunswick, was "long a personal friend of mine," Mr. Smallwood said. Mr. McNair was "a famous fighter for Maritime rights and after we went in for Atlantic provinces rights."

John James Deutsch was "probably the most knowledgeable man in all Canada of federal-provincial affairs." He was "a great friend of Newfoundland. . .a man of great sympahty for Newfoundland."

Of Newfoundland Chief Justice Sir Albert Walsh, third on the three commission members, Mr. Smallwood said "Newfoundland could be searched fom end to end and we would not find a better man to represent Newfoundland on this royal commission. He is thoroughly informed."

TO START SOON

Informed sources here said the commission would probably get together here within the next few weeks to begin studies. They would spend most of their time in St. John's holding public sessions although they would travel throughout the province. They would probably report to the federal government within this calendar year.

The sources said Parliament would probably act on the recommendations early in 1958 and vote additional funds to Newfoundland within the financial year beginning April 1, 1957.

A provincial royal commission has compiled the case to be presented to the federal royal commission. The report was written in three sections, one by commission chairman P. J. Lewis, Newfoundland cabinet minister without portfolio, one by mainland financial advisers, and one of commission member Albert B. Perlin, a St. John's businessman who has the task of editing the report to make the styles uniform.

Mr. Lewis will act as counsel for Newfoundland at hearings of the McNair Commission, and Mr. Perlin is expected to be chief witness. The Newfoundland commission's report is not expected to be made public before the hearings.

Meantime Newfoundland, confident of getting a direct cash grant of $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 annually from the federal government as a result of the commission's recommendations, is working on plans for spending the money.

DRAFT BUDGET PLAN

Three months ago Mr. Smallwood announced that Canadian tax expert J. Harvey Perry had been retained by his government to draft a budgeting plan for the province.

Mr. Smallwood said Friday he would "not be surprised" if Mr. Perry recommended capitalization of the federal adjustment grants to provide for quick large-scale improvements in public services.

He said such a recommendation would lead Newfoundland to float a big loan—he mentioned $175,000,000 as an example — to be drawn and spent during a five year period to improve roads, schools, water works, hospitals and other services.

By implementing the plan at the rate of $35,000,000 a year during a five-year-period enough of the federal grants could be saved from interest and sinking fund payments to extend the plan to six years.

Federal payments of$15,000,000 —if that happened to be the commission's recommendation — would amortize the loan in 12 or 15 years at which time another five-year plan could be undertaken

Pickersgill Gets Laugh In House

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizenship Minister Pickersgill raised a laugh in the Commons Friday when he said that as a former Boy Scout he is "still doing a good deed every day."

"What old lady did you help across the street today?" interjected A. J. Brooks (PC—Royal).

"One of the Conservative party," replied an unidentified member.

"I would always be willing to offer my arm to the honorable gentleman if he needs it," said Mr. Pickersgill with a smile.

The exchange came as Mr. Pickersgill read to the House a message he sent to the Canadian commissioner of Boy Scouts on the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lord Robert Baden - Powell, founder of the movement.

The minister offered congratulations in his capacity as minister "and as a former Boy Scout," and said scouting is a great force for goodwill and understanding. Its ideals were those on which Canadian citizenship was based.

VISA WITHDRAWAN

OTTAWA (CP)—The Egyptian government has withdrawan a visa granted to a British lawyer to enable him to defend four British subjects at a spy trial in Cairo, an official of the United Kingdom high commissioner's office said Friday. Rolla Edwards-Ker was named several weeks ago by the British foreign office as defence lawyer and later was granted a visa by Egyptian authorities. He now is in Canada on a visit and is considering emigrating to this country.

Opening lead—king of clubs.

The recent match in New York between Italy and the United States for the team of four championship of the world resulted in a smashing victory for the Italians. Thus Italy avenged the decisive defeat inflicted upon them in Naples in 1951 by a team consisting of George Rapee, Sam Stayman, John Crawford, Howard Schenken and the writer.

One intriguing hand played in the Naples match became famous because both the American and Italian Souths who handled the dummy, misplayeed it, but each declarer nevertheless made thirteen tricks.

The Americans gained 750 points because the Italian pair stopped at six diamonds. At both tables the king of clubs was opened and both declarers cashed five diamonds and five spades, leaving South with Q-10 of hearts.

On the last spade West, who had come down to K-8 of hearts and queen of clubs had to discard before dummy, which held A-9 of hearts and jack of clubs.

West had squeezed and had to make a fatal discard. Both Wests discarded a heart, giving declarer all the tricks.

The squeeze operated only because West had the king of hearts. There was a better line of play available which could succeed even if East had the king.

Proper play is to win the club lead and ruff a club. A diamond to the jack is followed by another club ruff and a spade to the jack is followed by still another club ruff (with the ace).

Two rounds of trumps now permit declarer to discard a heart, run his spades, and cash thirteen tricks

Ruffling our the clubs has a better chance to succeed than playing West for the king of hearts, which is at best a 50 per cent chance. The suggested method works whenever the diamonds break 3-2, or 68 per cent of the time.

Strange that in a world championship match both Souths overlooked the best play. Even experts have blind spots.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BEDTIME STORIES

Hooty Has To Believe His Ears

Your eyes and ears may be well . . schooled,
But even so they can be fooled.
—Hooty the Owl.

There are no better ears in all the Green Forest than those of Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty. Nor is there anything the matter with their eyes. In shadow-time few eyes are as good as theirs. It is on their eyes and ears they must depend to get their food. So it is that they seldom doubt what ears and eyes tell them. But they have learned the truth of that little saying of Hooty's, that even the best of eyes and ears can be fooled.

Hooty was wondering if his ears were being fooled now.

Hooty was wondering if his ears were being fooled now. He was sitting on a great pile of snow-covered brush. It was near the foot of the tall pine tree in which was the nest where Mrs. Hooty was sitting on two eggs. He was listening to what sounded like the faint crying or whining of a baby of some kind. But there were no babies in the Green Forest now. It was too early in the year, or so they thought. So Hooty was inclined to believe that it must be that his ears were being fooled now; that there really was some thing other than a baby's voice. He wished he could see under that pile of brush, but he couldn't. There was no way to get under it or peep under it.

Suddenly there was another sound. It was louder than that crying. He could hardly hear that crying because of that new sound. It was sort of rumbling growl. It was coming right down underneath that pile of brush. There was no doubt about it.

"Do you hear that?" he asked Mrs. Hooty, who had flown down to join him.

Mrs. Hooty nodded. "Of course I hear it," she said. "How could I help but hear it?"

All was still. There was no sound of crying. There was no rumbling growl. Nothing broke the silence in that lonesome place deep in the Green Forest. Hooty looked at Mrs. Hooty. Mrs. Hooty looked at Hooty. There was a puzzled look in their round yellow eyes.

"What in the world could that have been?" said Mrs. Hooty.

Before Hooty could reply he heard that rumbling growl again. Hooty no longer doubted his ears. He had to believe them. That was a real growl. It couldn't be anything else. No, sir, it couldn't be anything else.

Hooty turned to Mrs. Hooty. "It must be," said he.

"What must be?" retorted Mrs. Hooty, snapping her big bill.

"It must be that someone is down under this pile of brush," declared Hooty.

"Will you tell me how it can be? There has been no sign of anyone around here since we took over the nest in the big pine tree. There hasn't been a track in the snow. Anyone that can growl like that must be big. Certainly if anyone was around here, we would have seen them. They couldn't come and go and leave no tracks," declared Mrs. Hooty.

"Right, my dear, but just the same someone who can growl is down under this pile of brush. I've got to believe my own ears," said Hooty.

"Gr-r-r-r-r-r-r-," came from right down at their feet. It was a growl. There was no doubt about that. It was an impatient growl. It couldn't be, but it was.
