New Service Station Adds No Benefits

SUMMERSIDE BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN
National defence employees and their families will receive no further benefits than they have been receiving for the past seven years when the new Canadian Petrofina Limited service station opened for business at RCAF Station Summerside this fall, said a representative of the base yesterday.

Gasoline dealers and service station operators in both Summerside and St. Eleanors have been concerned for a number of months over the erection of the new station because they have felt it would take many of their customers and the operators would be able to sell the gas cheaper.

The matter was brought to the attention of the public by a story in yesterday's Guardian in which Ottawa correspondent Farmer Tinsington reported answers given by officials of the department of national defence who were queried on the operation of the service station by Hon. J. Angus MacLean, MP for Queens.

Both sets of parents gave the idea their blessing. "It seems to be working out very well," Mrs. G. W. Mansson said. "It has been in operation a week now and all four girls seem happy."

Mrs. Joneson said she has known Mrs. J. Strommeier 18 years and she "our ideas on raising children coincide."

"We will continue to assume responsibility for our own daughters, even though they are not living with us. We shall deal with school problems and fit them out with clothes."

All four girls think the idea is great. "They shall keep the arrangement until Christmas, and if all goes well, to until the end of the school year."

They could have controlled it by killing or burning down the tops. It was observed.

Kens Ramsay, district seed potato inspector, and Garth Harrison, district fruit and vegetable inspection, who deals with the tablestock spuds, confirmed this "overly large" report for Kennebecs, and Mr. Ramsay added that in some cases the Irish Cobbler have tended to oversize and they (Cobbler — "a thick, chunky tuber" — also tend to have hollow hearts, at times.

There has been little report on the Sebagoes, which account for the great bulk of Island potato production, as they are a late variety, and normally are the last to be harvested.

Blueberry production has been spotty this year with a late frost killing the blossoms on one or two of the largest commercial blueberry farms.

There have been a few reports of cats filling poorly this year, but Mr. Dewar believes that the general picture is good. While yields are down from a year ago, Mr. Dewar recalled that there were great harvesting difficulties a year ago due to the wet grounds, and that curtailed the overall production.

37 MOOSE KILLED
QUEBEC (CP)—Pierre Desmeules, director of the biological station in Laurentide Park, reported Monday that 37 moose — 24 males and 13 females — have been killed since the hunting season for moose opened Sept. 16. It closes Oct. 31. The biggest moose weighed 1,125 pounds, he said.

"As Modern As Tomorrow"

VALACHI

gangland leader had condemned to death. Everyone who came from the Sicilian village called Castel del Mar—and that was the ancestral home of most of the men in an opposition gang.

As he testified, an investigator traced gangland history on a big chart—a family tree of the mobs.

Valachi also testified that Vito Genovese, whom he has labelled the big boss in the New York mobs, still has a hand in Las Vegas gambling operations—even though he is behind bars, serving a narcotics sentence at Leavenworth, Kan.

Valachi began his story in 1951, when he joined a gang called "The Irish mob."

LOCKED IN WAR
Soon that outfit and "the Italian mob" were locked in a factory burglary.

Valachi said the Irish mob was "doing a little bit of job here and there, but it was dangerous . . . and they weren't making any money."

Then came a 44-month break, while Valachi served a sentence for a factory burglary.

When he got out, Valachi said, he formed his own gang to pull burglaries—the little he knew best. The gang pulled a robbery every three weeks or so, he said, averaging $1,500 to $2,000 a job, "I was taking it easy."

In 1952, Valachi said, Domi signed "The Gap" (Petrillo) agreement with the mob.

It was La Cosa Nostra, Valachi said, but he didn't know it at the time.

MOBSTER SLAIN
Behind his enlistment, Valachi said, was a smouldering mob dispute that began after Gaetano Gasplano, a mob underboss, was killed. That slaying, Valachi said, was "without justice," even in gangland terms.

Valachi said the gas, bossed by Salvatore Maranzano, wanted new faces so the rival mob of Giuseppe Masseria wouldn't recognize its personnel. And he said the Maranzano group had only about 15 members, and needed more.

That's where the chart came in. Lavern J. Duffy, a subcommittee staff member, used it and Valachi's intermittent testimony to trace the chain of slayings that shaped mob leadership.

The first victim, Duffy said, was Gaetano Reina, boss of one gang, who was killed on Feb. 26, 1930, by a Masseria mob slayer.

Masseria named Pizzolo to take over leadership of that gang, Valachi said, and the mob members didn't like it.

"Valachi said he complained to 'The Gap' about Pizzolo. 'Shut up he says, this guy's gonna die.'"

He did, in August or September of 1930, Valachi said Doyle told him he killed Pizzolo.

BERLIN CLUB BANNER PRESENTED

A member of the World Council of Service Clubs, Dany Sieg of West Berlin, arrived in Summerside yesterday as a guest of the Summerside Kinsmen Club. Mr. Sieg was met at the airport by Neil MacLeod, president of the local Kinsmen Club and W. Chester S. MacDonald, a past president. Following his arrival Mr. Sieg (right) presented Mr. MacLeod (centre) with a banner of the Summerside Kinsmen Club. Mr. Sieg was met at the airport by Neil MacLeod, president of the local organization with clubs in the United Kingdom, Europe, Australia and Africa and Mr. Sieg, a native of Israel, is the only Jewish member of the Round Table in West Germany. He is attending University in Berlin. Mr. MacDonald, (left) looks on.

Old-Fashioned Squid Jiggers Still Better Than New Method

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The old-fashioned squid-jiggers are getting a new squid, but that's more than can be said for the new-fangled methods.

A fishing dragger, with federal government permission to drag inside the three-mile fishing limit, has failed in an attempt to catch squid in its nets.

The vessel tried it as an experiment to see whether dragging would solve the problem of catching the 10-inch invertebrates which have been scarce in Newfoundland waters during the last two years.

Normally the miniature jet propulsion engine—squid motor—by taking in water and shooting it out again—are caught by fisherman on handlines and hooks, or jigs.

Squid are most preferred for bait by fishermen, but in the last two years they haven't been caught in the enormous quantities of most years. If the dragger experiment had worked, it would have meant an ample supply of squid until next year.

However, H. R. Bradley, area director of the federal fisheries department, said Monday that bait situation in the province isn't acute. "There is enough to keep the wolf from the door."
