MR. AND MRS. GRANT HUNT Hunt-DesRoches Nuptials Held At St. Paul's Side

A pretty wedding took place recently at St. Paul's Church, Summerside when Mary Norma Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert DesRoches, Tinian, P.E.I., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Grant Hunt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hunt, Bedford, N.S.

The marriage ceremony and the Nuptial Mass were celebrated by Rev. Father Bradley. The organist was Mrs. Thomas Perry, while Miss Sharon Mullis was soloist.

The altar was beautifully decorated with baskets of mixed summer flowers, while the guest pews were marked with white satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her floor-length gown of white lace. Her very full skirt with scalloped hemline was of reneval brodered lace, over tulle under skirt, with matching jacket and longilly point sleeves. Her elbow-length veil of French tulle illusion was held by tiara of silver sequins. She carried a

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Earth Was Close In Those Dear Long Lost Times

There was sweet scent of the hay in the yards today, when great loads of hay, it were brought in from the fields, and stored in the roomy loft of the pole-barn, a structure which keeps to itself in the rear of the other buildings. Great loads of hay were piled up, though the youngsters accept them as only ordinary nowadays.

"So big!" we exclaimed, watching a heaped wagon move easily up the lane, catching certain limbs the lawn-trees in passing.

"Big!" Gage echoed with a chuckle, "just average it this year. We do sometimes put on the extra big load, but these are only the usual," he said. But "big" and "fast" are terms reflected now in farm-machines, and "big" and "fast" are the younger farmers would have a he

How they would laugh, we think, to see the neat haywages of an older year! Those land-built conveyances, with shelveings to be put on and off according to the heavy requirements of the seasonal work. Drawn, as we recall it, by a pet of old man, or by the more progressive five farming later, grandly by a team. The hay was pitched by hand to the loads then, from the coils that had been spread earlier to sun and wind to that might reach that great degree of making, which resulted in excellent fodder.

Would these of ours now chuckle to see, once the load had been packed in the barn? Would the pitcher toss the ends of the reins up to the builder, and then, by a series of clicks, clink from shaft, to horse, to load, and seat himself comfortably there with the other? And after making sure the hayforks were well out on the way, and that there was no misadventure of upset along the way, drive down the lane, to the barn? Would the like of Granddaughter giggle over this? Or would she have tried it all, as did we in the young years, catching the perfection of those summer days, to treasure memory forever? The fragrant sunny breezes, the heavy scent of the farming, the closeness of the hay, the sound of those dear longest times.

They were caught and stored by willing hands. Conveyances banded in turn. Presently in a cluster of a going down the lane, they were off again to the saving.
