THE ENGINEER'S BI-WEEKLY

Students learn many things at UPEI but let's face it, much of what an Artsie learns is bullcrap. One course that should be offered to these degenerates is the fine art of mooching.

Perhaps the most fundamental lesson to be taught is the act of appearing at a friend's doorstep around mealtime. You can easily comment about having eaten at McDonald's three times in the last two days, and that the next time you see Ronald you are going to chuck on his shoes.

A course such as this would benefit even the stupidest of artsies (a large population) as it would aid them in their jobless futures. Of course this should be offered only as a prerequisite to Food 101.

We the second and third year engineers are pleased with the performance of our Frosh students who attended our recent "Garden Party and Tea Social" Initiations of every will-be engineer was the order of the day and the first year guys (and gals) passed with flying colours.

The amazing young'uns have a great ability to hold large amounts of beer and can slip down a bottle full in excellent time (watch out Bio-chuggers) which proves that engineers seem to be becoming more adept in our environment.

Letters to Snord
Dear Cranston:

Listen, all I want to know is why is there no "sunshine girl" on the front page of this paper?! You call yourselves "the Sun" don't you? I mean every other "Sun" in this country has a sunshine girl and you guys don't have anything except a picture of Mickey Mouse or something dumb like that!! So let's get with it okay? Thanks Bud.

Dear Cranston:

You want to clear up the administrations mess at UPEI? Here's what you do: Get a mass meeting of students down at the Barn Monday afternoon. Blow the entire Student Union's budget for the year and give away free beer to everyone for two days straight. You ask how this would solve the problem? Well, it wouldn't, but by Tuesday afternoon who would give a sh--!?!

The Engineer's Dictionary

Ass-As in "piece of" the elusive sexual object about which little is known hence the term "piece of ass" implies fragmentary knowledge. The seat of human pain. The object of the verb "to shove".

Bachelor- An unattached male who is a lover of females in batches.

Beer-Lifeflood

Bull-Short form for bullcrap. What you get in social science courses.

Bulldozer- A person who sleeps through psychology class!

Contraceptives- Something to be used at every conceivable occasion.

Second year engineers I last week held a practice for the usually annual elevator cram. After a boring electricity and magnetism (S and M) class they stuffed nineteen rowdy Lunatics into the Duffy elevator and traveled up and down the elevator for five minutes. The record of twenty one will fall (and so will we) some time next week.

In regard to one word which has appeared at least twice in this column (namely bullcrap) I apologize, it's the dirtiest word they'll print!!

Like, you know, the most important thing in life is love.

I'd love right another beer.
