Crapaud-Victoria Board Of Trade

The regular monthly meeting of the Crapaud-Victoria Board of Trade convened in Crapaud Hall, Feb. 6th with a good attendance. The president, Donald Hart presided.

The matter of continuous telephone service for the Crapaud Exchange was discussed. Petitions have been circulated, and about 80 per cent of the subscribers signed in favour of this service with the understanding that a small charge would be added to their monthly rent.

The Board was happy to have a snow-pow stationed at Crapaud. However, it was felt by the members present that the plow should first proceed from Crapaud to Victoria, then over the Lower Tryon Road to the Abolseau Bridge, returning over the same route, thus opening the road between the villages. After that, if it is possible, open the main route to Breadalbane.

A member introduced the matter having to do with old age pensions saying there seemed to be some discrimination in the administration of pensions to aged citizens. The Board instructed the secretary to write for a copy of the old age pension act in order that these cases might be reviewed.

Let's Talk It Over A Prince County Viewpoint

In the midst of a discussion about the recent flurry of letters to The Guardian from Summerside and vicinity, one man voiced the opinion that anyone who wrote a letter to the newspapers should sign his name to it, and there seemed to be fairly general agreement on that point. This opinion regarding anonymous letters is not new. We have heard the same pronouncement many times before, and sometimes in the middle of a newspaper battle of words one of the antagonists takes the other to task for not signing his name.

We are not entirely in agreement with the statement that it is always unfair to write a letter to a newspaper without signing your name. If the writer hides behind a nom de plume to cast reflections on personal attributes or the personal behavior of another writer, it is undoubtedly an act of cowardice. But if he sticks to the arguments surrounding the question debated, and carefully refrains from personalities, we think it is his right and privilege to use the nom de plume as long as he fulfills the requirement of giving his name to the publication which he is writing. (An unnecessary stipulation, perhaps because if he also keeps the newspaper personnel in the dark regarding his identity, the letter does not appear).

It is not a question of cowardice at all. Some writers like to take part in the controversies that are carried on in public forums; like to add their beliefs on current questions of the day, but dislike the publicity attached to having their names appear in print. Signatures do not usually add anything to an argument. In fact, they might detract from it. If you know who the person is, his social position and personality may give his expressed views distorted values. The "Colonel's Lady" might be able to convince a lot of people that black is almost white, while "Judy O'Grady" would have difficulty establishing the fact that white is the simon pure color it actually is. When arguments are advanced without support of personality, they stand or fall on their merits and we can assess them according to how reasonable they appear.

Of course we can't get away from the fact that personality does and should have some bearing on opinion. If John Doe told us that an attack from Russia was imminent, we would take it with the proverbial grain of salt, but if General Montgomery or Dwight Eisenhower should make such a statement, we would all become greatly concerned. We are willing to accept opinion that we do not understand if it is backed up by experience and prestige. This, however, hardly applies in the case of the common run of letters appearing in a newspaper. When they are unsigned, it defeats a certain natural curiosity on the part of the reader as to the source of the expressed opinion, but the writer, nevertheless, has every right to remain anonymous if he has not attacked his adversary from a personal angle.

Pays Tribute To Native Province

The following tribute to Prince Edward Island appeared recently in a Roman Catholic religious paper, the writer being Mrs. D. M. O'Brien, Alberta provincial president of the Catholic Women's League, and formerly Miss Winifred Cahill, of Kildare, P. E. I.: "Since I was on the shores of the Atlantic, I could not resist the temptation of visiting my native soil, Prince Edward Island.

The island has not changed much in the nearly forty years since I last saw it. The soil is just as red, the trees just as green, and the people as warm-hearted as ever. Jacques Cartier was the first known explorer to visit the island. He landed at Cape Kildare—near our home—in 1534. The Micmac Indians were there before him, and he describes them and the island in detail—fragrant trees, a rich soil, refreshing berries on a hot day, and natives filled with a pleasing modesty. The Micmacs called the island Abegweit, which means "cradled on the waves."

Although they have many new buildings in Charlottetown, including the beautiful St. Dunstan's Cathedral and a modern up-to-date hospital, the old Provincial Building is exactly the same as when it was completed in 1847.

At the regular meeting of the Regalite Rebekah Lodge No. 29 on Thursday evening the following officers were installed by Sister Annie Profit, District Deputy President. Noble Grand—Sister Helen Kerr; Vice-Grand—Sister Olive Wilkie; Secretary—Sister Maud Dyer; Treasurer—Sister Mabel Fielding.

Alberton Canadian Legion Branch Monthly Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Alberton branch of the Canadian Legion was held in the Legion Home on Feb. 1st, with the president, Comrade Dunn in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Then followed a report by Comrade McCreary, even about applications for membership and the letters which were sent out to all ex-servicemen. Four applications were accepted. A discussion on honorary members followed, and it was moved by Comrade Leavitt and seconded by Comrade McKinnon that the following be nominated as honorary members as they were of great assistance to the Legion in giving their time and labor in the alterations to the Legion Home: Hunter Weeks, Arthur Bernard, Howard Clarke, Edward Millman, J. A. Callaghan, Stephen Burks, Alfred Foley, H. E. Barbour, Ernest Hardy. It was also moved that the secretary write and inform the above mentioned men of their acceptance as honorary members for the coming year. It was moved by Comrade Perry and seconded by Comrade Nicholson that an amendment be made in the by-laws to close the Home at 11:30 p.m. in place of 11:00 p.m. as set forth.

Working in close cooperation with the Navy Director Andre de Toth and Producer William Ferber have put on the screen with great fidelity the hazardous operations of the men who fly the Navy's four-engine Privateers into the teeth of 120-mile-an-hour tempests. Throughout its war-time service, the reconnaissance squadrons kept automatic cameras in operation to chart flying into the storm centers and Dr. Toth selected the most exciting sequences from these top-secret films to add to the production.

This valuable footage, never before shown except for Navy training films, includes vivid sequences showing great flocks of birds desperately trying to fly out of the storm centers and thrilling shots of the expert pilots winging it into the very "eye" of the storms. Once in the "eye," an area of comparative calm, the pilots chart the speed and direction of the hurricane thus enabling land stations to send out storm warnings.

Here many a 'battle royal' was fought in the struggle for responsible government, free schools and over the payment of rents to landlords living in England. Here in September 1864, twenty-six representatives of Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario and Quebec first officially discussed the union of the British possessions in North America.

"It is interesting to note that the room in which this meeting took place, called now the Confederation Chamber, still has the same furniture of antique mahogany, and is exactly the same as it was in 1864. Moreover, it is the only known building now standing where any of the Confederation conferences took place. The table on which Confederation was signed is now in the Legislative Building in Regina, Sask.

"When I reached the Island again, and drove once more along the winding roads I recalled with pleasure the quaint place names, many of Indian origin. In the days to come I know I'll recall with pleasure the meal served to us in the Charlottetown Hotel, oysters on the shell, fresh lobster, Island turkey, baked squash, spuds and cranberry pie."
