Strong Pleas To Strengthen Morals Made

TORONTO (CP)—Strong pleas to strengthen morals marked the first three days of the United Church of Canada's board of evangelism and social service annual meeting here.

Charlotte Whitton, former mayor of Ottawa, told delegates to the annual meeting Thursday that most churches were concerned with grave symptoms of moral and spiritual deterioration.

With their materialistic outlook, Canadians were selling their country's "tomorrow" for "cash and carry today." In her speech she also criticized combines and monopolies for maintaining high prices.

O. Frederick Nolde, director of the commission of churches on international affairs, told the meeting that basic Christian truths must be applied intelligently to ever-changing world ideas and conditions.

"The household of faith," he said, "offers its witness to the whole family on earth of which it is part."

Mr. Nolde recommended that churchmen closely "scritinize" attempts by political leaders to use force which they call "moral" to solve their particular problems.

"The language of churchmen has become the language of government leaders concerned with international affairs," he said.

The meeting resolved Wednesday to ask the Toronto Telegram to reconsider its reported plan to publish a Sunday edition starting March 17.

The resolution also called upon Attorney-General Kelso Roberts, as chief law officer of the Crown in Ontario, "to enforce the Lord's Day Act by having a seller of the Sunday Telegram arrested and charged with a contravention of such act."

Canadian Padres Take On Moses' Old Parish-Sinai

By JACK BRALEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ABU SUWEIR (CP)—With altars and pulpits made of old packing cases, two Canadian padres express pride and satisfaction in their job of "working Moses' old parish" of Sinai.

Capt. Ormond Hopkins of Perth, Ont., the Protestant chaplain, and Capt. Louis Schmidt of Duck Lake, Sask., his Roman Catholic counterpart, both say the Canadians in the United Nations Emergency Force have a serious approach to religion and a keen sense of spiritual values.

Their headquarters are the chapels that have been established in the old RAF married quarters building. But both padres agree they get closer to their flock in informal chats on the tent lines or at the desert outposts.

BIG PARISH

Both have similar problems in covering a parish that extends from El 'Arish, in the northeast section of the Sinai Peninsula, to this base in the west centre and El Tor in the south. It includes country visited by the boy Christ as well as the mountain on which Moses received the Ten Commandments.

Pointing to the costumes, the ancient mode of transportation and the primitive agriculture and living conditions, Father Schmidt remarked on the sharp impression that strikes all Canadians—that there is little change from biblical times.

"Moses could come back today and find little progress," he says. "And Christ would find as much poverty as he knew in his time."

The chaplains were interviewed separately as they helped sappers and workshop troops put the finishing touches to the chapels, which are end to end. You can hear each service from either chapel.

DIRECTS CHOIR

Father Schmidt himself directs the Catholic Choir while the Protestant musical director is workshop Staff Sgt. Clarence Borrowman of Weyburn, Sask.

Each chapel has a portable organ, the Protestant one played by Kenneth Nathaniel, an Indian junior commissioned officer, and the Catholic by dental Sgt. Marc Mongeau of Montreal. Nathaniel is one of the many members of the other 11 national units in the UNEF who take advantage of the Canadian chaplain service. He is a graduate of a Canadian Anglican Church school in the Punjab, where his father is a minister.

When the choir isn't divided for church, it becomes the Workshop Glee Club of 16 interdenominational voices under Borrowman, who plays the piano and organ and has had choir experience in Canada. One of his baritones, Cpl. Don Waldron, had formal voice training at home in Kingston, Ont.

Both Capt. Hopkins and Father Schmidt hold regular Sunday services at the nearby El Balah headquarters of the UNEF, where Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, the commander, sometimes reads the lesson at the Protestant service.

Father Schmidt has served at Edmonton, Camp Borden, Ont., and in Germany. His last civilian post was with the novitiate of the Oblates at Winnipeg. He is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Seminary at Le Bret, Sask.

"There is no doubt about the quiet but definite interest in religion among our troops here," he says. "I find this especially when I talk to individuals and among the smaller outposts in the field."

FEMINIST DISOWNED

CAIRO (AP) — Mrs. Doria Shafik has been ousted from the Egyptian feminist organization she founded, apparently because of outspoken opposition to the regime of President Nasser. The board of directors of Bint el Nil (Daughters of the Nile) voted to remove Dr. Shafik from the presidency of their organization as well as from membership shortly after she ended a 10-day hunger strike protesting what she called the "dictatorial regime heading Egypt for bankruptcy."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	4 ♥

Opening lead—eight of spades.

It takes a seldom used play to make this hand. Declarer has to be right on his toes or down he goes. Only extreme sensitivity to the existing conditions can turn the trick.

The bidding followed standard lines. North's spade response, despite the anemic composition of the suit, was proper. Any five card suit is biddable, and this is especially true when the suit is a major.

South rebid his six card suit in perference to raising spades immediately with only neutral support. North's jump to game was virtually automatic, considering he had an opening bid of his own and had found a place to play the hand.

The singleton spade was opened. West took the ace, returned the queen, South played the king, and West trumped. The jack of diamonds was led, the queen lost to the king, the spade jack was cashed, and the declarer was down.

All the plays seem natural, yet declarer goofed. He had the hand made for sure just by ducking the queen of spades at trick two. If he does this the best East can do is lead another spade which West ruffs.

Against the expected diamond returns South goes up with the ace, trumps a spade with the jack, draws trumps ending in dummy, and discards the losing diamond on dummy's fifth spade.

All of which is easy enough to see looking at the 52 cards, but why should South be expected to know it is best not to cover the queen of spades? The answer is that South cannot lose the hand if he allows the spade queen to win, but may lose the contract if he plays the king on the queen.

If West's lead is assumed to be a singleton, the danger of covering is obvious, as has been shown. If West, by any chance, has a doubleton the contract is completely safe because the spades are now an established suit.

If West has a tripleton, East has no more and declarer has the rest of the tricks.

BEDTIME STORIES

The News Spreads

Good or bad the news will go
Everywhere that breezes blow.
—Old Mother Nature.

It may not always be true, but it often does seem as if Old Mother West Wind is right about the way news travels. It spreads about so quickly that it does seem that it must be carried by the wind.

'More trouble," whined Prickly porky when he heard the news.

It was now very near the end of winter. Mistress Spring was on her way and soon would reach the Green Forest. The Great Horned Owls, Hooty and Mrs. Hooty, who do not have horns at all, already had two eggs in a big nest in a tall tree in the most lonesome part of the Green Forest. There would be baby Owls by the time Mistress Spring arrived, perhaps before. It had long been the boast of Mrs. Hooty that they had the first babies of the year. Now they had found out that this wasn't true. Those two eggs of their's had not yet hatched and there had been babies there in the Green Forest even before those eggs had been laid. Those babies were a month old already. Their mother said so and she should know. She was Mrs. Buster Bear.

She had been sleeping ever since the first snow deep enough to cover everything in the way of food. She had made her bed beneath a great pile of brush which really was an old windfall. No one had seen her crawl under it. Snow has covered the big windfall, making a great white mound of it. Until now no one had known she was there, not even Hooty and Mrs. Hooty who had taken possession of an old Hawk nest in a tall tree close to that big mound. They looked right down on it and hadn't suspected that they had neighbors. Then this day they had heard what sounded like a baby crying. It was faint and smothered but it had seemed to come straight from beneath that mound. They couldn't believe their own ears than which there are no better ears in all the Green Forest. Then Mother Bear, thinking winter must be over, had crawled out.

She didn't stay out long, but crawled back to her small cubs and to try to go back to sleep until Mistress Spring should arrive.

Now until she had come out no one had known where she was. here had been no footprints in the snow because when she had made her bed under the old windfall snow had been falling and had soon covered the tell-tale prints. Now she had hardly settled herself to sleep again before the news had spread all through the Green Forest. Only those who were themselves sleeping failed to hear it.

There were many visitors to that lonesome part of the Green Forest to stare at that big white mound and see the place where Mrs. Bear had come out and gone back in, but all kept at a respectful distance.

"More trouble," whined Prickly Porky when he heard the news.

"What do you mean by more trouble?" asked Jumper the Hare.

"Did you ever see a small Bear who wasn't full of mischief? Probably there is more than one. One would be bad enough, but two will be more than twice as bad. With two cubs full of mischief to look after Mrs. Bear will have her paws full and a short temper or my name isn't Prickly Porky. There will be no peace for some of the rest of us while they are around." Prickly Porky's voice was a fretful whine.
