A SHORTENING.

Down the street through the busy way A lady passed on marketing day.

Who, pausing at a grocery store, Stepped quickly in at the open door.

"What is it?" said he to the dame, "That answers to this curious name. What is it made of? What's its use? My ignorance you'll please excuse."

"You're not the merchant for my dimes, I see you're quite behind the times, For COTTOLENE, I'd have you know, Is now the thing that's all the go."

An article of high regard; A healthful substitute for lard. Its composition pure and clean; For cooking give me COTTOLENE."

NEVER OUT OF DATE.

PRETTINESS ALWAYS IN FAVOR, WHATEVER PEOPLE SAY.

The Way of Dressing the Hair—How Women Should Carry Their Hair—How They Want to Carry Themselves Finely.

For fully a dozen of these last years, or since they brought snowdrops or sprouting peas or fish stores or Christmas trees, we had the authoritative assurance that the bang was doomed, fringed outlawed, fluff clean out of style.

Yet every year womankind has gone on rolling, frizzing, curling, burning its brows with hot irons, risking fiery death through the unnecessary and needless lamp, sleeping an unhappy martyr with rolls of paper or wire or stuff all over the head, for the sake of having flowy tresses or curls to which so much of the child beauty is due.

There is nothing more ghastly than a hard-featured or thin, faded face with the hair parted undeviatingly above the forehead and strained in a dead line round about it. In such cases even unduly soft and wavy, torn by wind and weather from the terrifying sickness, are a blessed relief. Therefore let each woman judge herself over the fact that though the high and mighty are again saying that the fringe must go, that harmless and beautiful appendage is staying right on, quite as though it knew itself the delight of the eyes, in spite of those same high and mighty authorities.

THE ELBOWS FAR BACK. The elbows are now worn quite behind the waist. So runs the latest fashion mandate, which isn't as absurd as it sounds. It is a very good rule, for so universally recognized is the fact that a fine carriage is one of the essentials of a prepossessing appearance that the smartest women will throw out and her elbows necessarily fall well back out of the way.

This is particularly true of city women, who realize that the woman who makes the best effect is always the woman who carries herself well. On closer acquaintance, the very face begins to tell, and somewhere between the two the dress comes in for a share of attention as a detail with men.

And it is to please men that women dress, except a few selfish women who dress to aggravate other women.

It isn't saying to wear the street gown during hours at home, says a wise woman. It is better after the promenade, both for comfort and economy, to exchange the street gown for a dress of more interest of her personal charms a woman should get rid of her street costume as soon as may be done after she arrives at home. And let her see to it that the garment is thoroughly dusted, shaken, pressed and hung upon a book in a closet or a wardrobe when she touches the soiled spots with benzoin and should examine the seams for broken stitches. In a big city, if one hasn't a maid, it is every woman's duty to clean up her own wardrobe.

It is better to keep a hand, serviceable, clean pair of shoes on hand for the kind of spring, reserving the better pairs for kinder weather.

Of course you know that rain ruins kid gloves. No matter what price you pay for them or how superior the quality, dampness will make them chip off and lose shape.

This theory of saving applies to a sufficient number of undergarments and kinds for various necessities of wear. It is just the same with pocket handkerchiefs, handkerchiefs and the small accessories of the toilet.

And so for hats, well, everybody knows that a small shaver makes choice of the smartest heading out of a millinery emporium. There's no chance for an argument along that line.

Of course, it is every woman's duty to care enough for the financial interests of the family to convince her husband or father that enough to wear is a saving in dollars and cents.

The woman who is her own main support will be richer if she can have suitable gowns and other clothing for occasions when she is called upon to appear under all circumstances.

SMART SAYINGS ABOUT WOMEN. Fion—Fortunes and women are partial to fools.

Jerrold—Never ask a woman her age; ask it of some other woman.

Spanish proverb—For whom does the blind man's wife adorn herself?

Thomas Fuller—He knows little who will tell his wife all he knows.

Victor Hugo—Women detect the serpent through a professional jealousy.

Flamingo—He who trusts himself draws water from pitchers full of different rivers.

Rivaroli—It is said that friendship between women is only a suspension of hostilities.

Victor Hugo—Women are afflicted by trifles; but they are also consoled by trifles.

An unknown misanthrope—Three things are given to women: a mirror, a comb, and a husband.

Scarson—Brilliant of the first wife are those given to stay the wife's first bed of rest.

Hallburton—Women will sometimes confess their sins, but I never knew one to confess her faults.

Voltaire—Ideas are like beads—most never have any until they grow up, and women have none at all.

Balzac—Woman is a most charming creature, she changes her heart as readily as she does her gloves.

Goethe—Woman is a mistress of the art of completely embarrassing the life of the persons on whom she depends.

Heine—The music at a marriage procession always reminds me of the music of soldiers entering upon a battle.

Voltaire—Some women have hearts as brittle as glass; but that would engrave his name on them must use diamonds.

Treating His Honesty. Your druggist is honest if when you ask him for a bottle of Scott's Emulsion he gives you just what you ask for. He knows this is the best form in which to take cod liver oil.

Wash off the cholera by getting your system in healthy working condition. Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic, with a course also of Hawker's Pills, will excite every organ of the body to healthy action and afford the surest safeguard against disease.

For many centuries so great was the regard felt in Europe for the wedding ring, that a wife would sooner part with her life than with the emblem of her marriage.

The area of British India, including the dependent states, amounts to 1,500,000 square miles. There are 2,000 towns with a population of 200 or upwards, and nearly 716,000 villages, comprising 33,000,000 dwelling places for man. The population of the island is 287,000,000. The males exceed the females by 6,000.

A venerable clergyman has resigned his charge in San Francisco because, as he asserted, the ladies of the choir sing and the men speak in a manner that preaches his most eloquent sermons, and annoyed him so much that he was often tempted to sit down in the midst of his discourses and let them do all the talking.

One sees Arabs coming into Constantinople with a donkey load of wood, which they sell for nothing. They have come twenty-five miles with it, and next day ride the donkey back. As a result of this business, the wood is sold for nothing and the donkey does all the work, what seems a small profit is really a good one.

Hawaii was seen in India last year for the slaying of 284 tigers, 442 panthers, 131 bears and 85 wolves. In the last four years there have been destroyed more than 1,000 panthers, 2,000 panthers, 500 bears and 300 wolves. On the other hand, wild beasts killed 317 people and 290 cattle last year, and there were 120 deaths of human beings from snake bites.

It must be a terrifying revelation to those foreign ladies who kiss their cats the Italian chemist. He found by experiment that when a cat licks its lips it spreads over them a saliva in which there are swarms of minute bacilli not free from danger to human being. When he inoculated rabbits and guinea pigs with this noxious substance they died within twenty-four hours, and he has come to this conclusion that it is dangerous for a man to indulge in the habit of kissing their paws.

Very few people are aware that the pearl oyster is not in any way like the oysters which we eat. It is of an entirely different species, and as a matter of fact the shells of the so-called pearl oyster are of far more value to those engaged in pearl fishing than the pearls. There are estimated to be 100,000 pearl oysters in the Gulf of California, and some of the finest pearls have been taken from those waters.

In 1881 on pearl—a black one—was sold for $10,000, and every year since that time many pearls have been taken from the beds in the California Gulf valued at over $7,500 each.

Some noteworthy experiments have been made in England with cholera bacilli. The method adopted was to place cholera germs on various vegetables and fruits and to ascertain by periodical examinations what had become of them. It was found that these poisonous microbes are still alive on salad leaves at the end of five days, while on uncooked spinach leaves they were discovered even after twelve days.

Similar results were obtained with cucumbers, cauliflower, cabbages and numerous kinds of fruits. In 4 per cent. infusions of black Chinese tea cholera germs could not be detected at the end of one hour, while being immersed in a 6 per cent. infusion of coffee for two hours they had completely disappeared.
