Deny C. N. R. Plan "Menace" To C. P. R. System

OTTAWA, May 1 — (CP) — A Canadian National Railways spokesman has stated the C. N. R.'s huge capital reorganization plan is "no menace" to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Hugh O'Donnell, C. N. R. senior counsel, made the statement before the Royal Commission on Transportation, which for several days has been hearing C. P. R. objections to the revision scheme on the ground it would threaten the financial position of the privately-owned company.

Further conflict in the involved financial battle between the two railways developed when Mr. O'Donnell challenged the C. P. R. submissions on several points and described them as a "red herring" complicating the "real problem."

F. C. S. Evans, C. P. R. vice-president and general counsel, promptly and warmly denied any "red herring" motive in the C. P. R.'s objections, and Mr. O'Donnell agreed there was no "improper" motive. But he insisted the C. P. R.'s submissions tended to draw attention from the C. N. R.'s problem.

J. J. Frawley, Alberta counsel, joined in the attack on the C. P. R.'s presentation, reiterating earlier suggestions that the Canadian Pacific should be willing to grant freight-rate concessions to shippers if it were to receive protection from effects of the government line's $1,000,000,000 reorganization plan.

The C. P. R. came back with evidence from a new witness—Courtland Elliott, Toronto economic consultant—criticizing the C. N. R. plan and urging "extreme caution" on it lest it lead to eventual bankruptcy of the Canadian Pacific.

He was the third witness to give evidence on behalf of the C. P. R. this week in this vein. All expressed fears that the plan could result in large C. N. R. surpluses, leaving the C. P. R. in an impaired competitive position.

The scheme, proposed before the Commission last month by C. N. R. president Donald Gordon, is aimed at slicing the C. N. R.'s annual fixed charges from $46,000,000 to about $17,000,000. This would be done by having the Federal Government swap $760,000,000 worth of interest-bearing C. N. R. obligations for non-interest capital stock and set up in addition a $300,000,000 capital fund for the company.

Grain

WINNIPEG, May 1—(CP)— All oats and barley futures, and October rye futures, marked up new seasonal highs in trading on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Rye prices advanced to the 10 cent limit in May and June, and almost moved to the 10 cent high in October. Trading was active.

The increases were attributed to an aggressive general demand for all grains, including American accounts in rye, light offerings and unfavorable conditions in the United States.

In export business, the United Kingdom was allocated 200,000 bushels of wheat under the Anglo-Canadian wheat agreement. South Africa bought 365,000 bushels and Switzerland 350,000 bushels.

Class two wheat, for export to countries other than the United Kingdom, was up one cent.
