THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 22, 1889.

Imperial Federation vs. Commercial Union.

The Patriot is quite willing that the Mother Country should be discriminated against by means of a Commercial Union with the United States; but it is not willing that the United States should be discriminated against by the adoption of the scheme of Imperial Federation.

For THE EXAMINER, we may say—in reply to the Patriot—that we are content with the status quo, though we should be better pleased if the United States would consent to a fair and reasonable arrangement providing for reciprocity of trade between the States and Canada.

This country is prospering and developing in spite of the inimical policy of the States; and she had much better continue to prosper and develop on the lines laid down for her than make any radical change in her national arrangements before she is fully ready to do so.

If, however, the option of accepting Commercial Union with the States or Federation with the British Empire were now presented to the people of Canada, we think that they should choose the Federation.

Apart altogether from the fact that Canada's fiscal policy under a Commercial Union would be dictated from Washington apart from the consideration that Commercial Union must inevitably lead on to Annexation, there are weighty reasons why Canada should prefer not to hobble herself in respect to the trade of the world for sake of merely gaining an advantage in the markets of a country which, as a whole, exports what she exports and imports what she imports.

The Patriot's fear lest Canada, while gaining by Imperial Federation) an advantage over the United States in the British markets, would arouse the hostility of the States, is probably baseless. The people of the States would probably say that "the Canucks have been smart enough to get on the inside track" and at once open negotiations for the purpose of regaining, if possible, the advantage they had lost.

Can it be doubted that they would be willing to make tariff concessions to the British Empire in order that they might obtain free access to the markets of Great Britain for their surplus grain, cattle, etc.?

At any rate, the people of the States do not consult our feelings when they determine what their Commercial policy shall be; and Canada is not bound to consult their feelings in respect to any arrangements which her people desire to make with the mother country and other parts of the British Empire.

A private letter from Virden, Manitoba, in discussing the crop question, says: "As there appears to be a good deal of discussion going on regarding the crops up here, I just give you my impressions from actual observation, going over a large portion of Manitoba. From all I can see, barley and oats will be almost failures, and the wheat not certainly over a third of a crop. Many fields are not worth cutting; others will not give over 2½ bushels to the acre. Some fields, the exceptions, however, are good. Of course the drought is blamed for everything. Whilst this is the main cause, no doubt, for the failure, there are others—bad farming, frost in May. From all I can see, only one farmer out of every five knows how to cultivate, prepare the ground, etc.

The Agriculturist traverses the Patriot's opinions about the Experimental Farm at Nappan, and says: "It (the Patriot) endeavors to convey the impression that the climate of Nappan, its fogs and so forth, will interfere with the usefulness of the Farm. Its fears, on that score, it will permit us to say, are groundless. The writer is familiar with that part of Nova Scotia, having resided for many years within four or five miles of the Farm, and has no hesitation in affirming that the climate of Nappan is not appreciably different from our own. Nor does the fog at that place amount to anything. The Experimental Farm is itself a splendid body of rich land, and forms part of one of the most fertile and prosperous farming sections of Nova Scotia, and is surrounded by other sections equally rich, from which abundant crops of all kinds are every year harvested. As it was not reasonable to expect the Farm to be located in this Province—though our farmers have an unquestionable right to one here—a better selection could hardly have been made, and the farmers of this province may, without hesitation, avail themselves of the advantages of the Maritime Experimental Farm."

Messrs. Willis & Co., of Montreal, whose Brothers have just opened out here on Queen Street in the Piano and Organ business, supply Pianos to nearly all great Concerts. There is scarcely a Montreal paper can be lifted that does not note and acknowledge some notable and public charity or disinterested kindness from this well-known firm.

Quebec rejoices in the fact that the local timber market is decidedly stiffer, owing to encouraging news from England.
