The biddings:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 NT | Pass | 3 NT |

Opening lead—six of hearts.

Point count can frequently be used to find the best defense to a contract. For a simple case of the application of point count to defense we cite East's play of the queen of hearts on the opening trick.

The normal play for East to make when his partner opens a heart is to win the first trick with the ace. This is in line with the general principle of third hand high. East then continues with the queen. When declarer ducks, East next plays the four.

It will be observed that the effect of these plays is that declarer makes three notrump. South makes four club tricks, after losing a finesse to the queen, three spades, a heart, and a diamond.

But if East plays the queen of hearts on the opening lead, it is quite likely that declarer will be defeated. The chances are that South will win the queen of hearts with the king, because he will be afraid West started with something like A-J-x-x-x of hearts and that, if he ducks the heart, the defenders will immediately run five heart tricks.

Once South takes the queen of hearts he is a deceased pigeon. The best he can do is score eight tricks. Whenever East comes into the lead, he returns the ace and another heart to defeat the contract.

Why does East vary from the usual procedure of playing third hand high? The answer is that, he knows declarer has the king of hearts and he wants to force South to win the trick.

The opening notrump bid has a range of 16 to 18 points. Since East is looking at 11 points in dummy and 11 points in his own hand, there are only 18 points left for South and West to have (there are 40 points in the deck).

It therefore becomes impossible for West to have a king, since this would leave South with only 15 points. But even if South cheated by one point during the bidding and lacked the king of hearts, the queen would win the opening lead

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. each day the code letters are different.
