Premier Shaw Has Appeal For Students' Housing Space

Premier Walter R. Shaw said this morning he was making a personal appeal to residents of the Charlottetown area to provide rooms for about a dozen high school students from Manitoba who will be in the province from July 17 to July 23 as part of a student exchange tour. All provinces will be interchanging students during the same period as part of an educational tour in connection with Centennial Year and an Island delegation will visit Quebec.

Premier Shaw said he was disappointed with the response to the call for accommodation for the Manitoba students. He said, "It would be preferable," he said, "to have them stay in homes for the week they are here as teenagers. It is hoped that our people will provide the Manitoba students with sleeping space and possibly breakfast during their stay with us."

Premier Shaw pointed out that Island students will be entertained in Quebec homes and felt that Islanders should provide similar accommodation to the student visitors. "It is a very fine thing," he said, "for young people to visit other parts of Canada, meeting people, getting different viewpoints and seeing the progress of the different areas."

He said the department of education would be happy to hear from persons who can accommodate some students. (Continued from page 1) and are members of the National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges.

While it is hoped the new organization will bring about a marked degree of co-operation between the Atlantic universities, each will retain its own degree-granting powers, internal autonomy, board of governors or trustees, control of property, endowments, and finances, its own internal academic organization, system of discipline and other related powers.

The organization has an advisory council and an executive council. The president is composed of the presidents of the member universities, with chancellors and one chairman of the boards of governors as ex-officio members.

The advisory board is composed of vice-presidents or deans of member universities and two members appointed annually by the senate or council of each university.
