Met Red Cross Executive Here

Richard H. Giuns, national director of public relations of the Canadian Red Cross Society, is in Charlottetown on a two day visit. He is here to confer with executive members of the Prince Edward Island Division, and terms his coast-to-coast tour a fact-finding mission to co-ordinate public relations activities of the Society.

At a Division executive meeting yesterday he complimented the Division for the generous support of the 1953 campaign when it was reported that 90 per cent of the provincial appeal had been achieved. Mr. Giuns stated that the 1953 appeal on a nation-wide basis was not yet complete but when final returns are tabulated "it is expected this year's campaign will be the most successful since the war."

Speaking of the current activities of the Canadian Red Cross, Mr. Giuns remarked that Canada has been most fortunate as many plagued by disasters. He said, "This year has brought disasters to nations on all sides of us but we have been spared." He then highlighted the work of the Canadian Red Cross in the role of international relief which has been an important interest this year.

Immediate Aid Forwarded

Through a system of stockpiling relief supplies made by volunteer workers of the Women's Work Committee Canadian Red Cross has been able to forward immediate aid to many stricken nations. These supplies are forwarded to the League of Red Cross warehouses at Geneva at regular periods, and when news of a disaster reaches Canada a cable to Geneva requests the release of the varied forms of relief to the stricken peoples. This policy has meant that Canadian Red Cross aid has been in the forefront.

Further aid to the victims of the Ionian Islands earthquakes was on its way to Greece on Friday when the Greek relief ship "Nea Hellas" sailed from Halifax with a shipment of Canadian Red Cross relief articles valued at $28,000. It included 900 jackets, 1,665 pairs of shoes and 2,000 blankets. A total of $57,000 has been expended to date by the Canadian Red Cross for relief in the Greek disaster. Earlier a $17,000 shipment was sent on from Geneva and this was followed by an R.C. A.F. North Star loaded with canned meat, sugar, soap, coats and 250 items of bedding.

Teachers Convention At Montague Is Concluded

Mr. J. P. McCarthy, principal of Truro Normal School yesterday delivered an instructive and enlightening address on the subject "What is Teaching" during the second day of the teachers convention being held at Montague.

Mr. McCarthy stated that the prestige of the teaching profession has fallen due to the fact that the short supply of teachers has tended to lower the educational standards required from those who engage in the work. He said that teachers can do something about the situation by insisting through their organizations that higher qualifications be demanded.

"Teaching is not hearing lessons, and telling is not teaching," stated Mr. McCarthy. Good teaching should guide the pupils to find out the answers for themselves wherever possible. He demonstrated his statements by presenting a common problem in arithmetic, and showed how to guide the pupils to draw their own conclusions in building a rule to suit the occasion. He said that telling pupils instead of teaching them is easy but not effective.

In following his subject further he said that the teacher should have a definite object for each lesson, and a definite object for each grade during the year. Pupils should be led to compete with their own records instead of with the records of others. He summarized by showing that interest should be provided for the pupil although it did not necessarily mean that the problem should be made easy. He emphasized the importance of drill to fix the lesson in the mind of the pupil.

Mrs. W. Scantlebury, representing the principal organization, gave a comprehensive outline of the work of The Home and School Association.

The question box was opened before the convention dismissed for dinner.

Afternoon Session

At the afternoon session, Dr. L. W. Shaw addressed the teachers on silent reading. He said that the grade ten examinations had a tendency to influence the matter taught during the year, and that the department was putting every effort to improve the examination so as to avoid this. He said that the answers showed that in many cases the pupils writing the examinations seemed not to be able to interpret the meaning of the question due to poor silent reading. He stressed that the proper concept of words and the correct reaction to written words should be begun in grade one. Rapid readers are likely to be the ones who can assimilate long groups of words in one glance, and teachers should develop this ability in the pupils. He used a short test to prove that the rapid reader is usually the one who gets the meaning of the selection. He stressed the importance of interpretation throughout his address.

Dr. Shaw was present to answer the questions in the question box. Other speakers were Mr. J. G. Dennis and Mr. Hennessey who explained credit unions to the teachers, and Miss Marie Bonness who spoke on the Junior Red Cross.

Resolutions Adopted

The following resolutions were passed:

1. Thanks extended to the Montague School Board for the use of the school for the convention, and to the speakers who made the convention such a success.

2. Whereas it has been established that some dishonesty enters into the preparation of nature projects for examination purposes in grade ten, and whereas the Department of Education disregarded this resolution last year, be it resolved that this convention strongly repeat its request that these projects be discontinued for examination purposes.

3. The convention expressed its appreciation to Mr. Willard Braham, who is leaving for further studies in Toronto, for his work in the past and also for his success in the future.

4. It extended congratulations to Hon. Keir Clark on his appointment as Minister of Education.

5. Whereas the Department of Education and the Family Allowance Board make provision for the release of pupils for farm work during harvest time, and whereas the long break in school activities is detrimental to the education of the pupils, be it resolved that the fall vacation be abolished.

6. The convention strongly supported the Home and School Association, and recommended it to school districts not served by similar groups.

7. Whereas the present method of paying that part of a teachers salary payable by the school district is unsatisfactory, be it resolved that the government be asked to enact legislation making such salary payable directly to the government instead of to the teacher as at present, and then paid to the teacher in monthly instalment.

8. The convention supported the formation of a teachers credit union.

9. Whereas many teachers attending convention have problems for which they hope to obtain a solution, and whereas such little time is allotted for this, be it resolved that fewer speakers be on convention programs in order that more time can be spent on teachers problems.

10. It extended congratulations to Mr. Hughes and his two scholarship winners on their excellent showing in their examinations.

The new slate of officers for the ensuing year are president, Mr. Joseph Scully, Georgetown; vice-president, Grant Clements; secretary, Mrs. Hickox.

transportation commission to enable discussion on possible courses of action after the latest rulings of the board of transport commissioners become available. Increasing freight rates have hit heavily at Maritime trade.

Pooling Resources

There has been speculation that some form of pooling resources may be discussed. Things of common concern include the production and marketing of potatoes, lumber and fish.

About 60 government officials and business men will attend the one-day meeting. An especially large delegation is expected from Fredericton.

Mr. Macdonald, 63, an expert on constitutional matters and a mild-speaking but outstanding orator, is the man who led the campaign to bring Newfoundland into Confederation. He is also famed for his bow tie, aggressive political style, and go-getting.

Premier Flemming, 54, a rugged lumber operator, led the Progressive Conservative party in New Brunswick for the first time when the electors last year ended 17 years of Liberal government.

Less widely known than the others, Premier Matheson, 50, was minister of health and welfare before succeeding J. Walter Jones last May after the latter's appointment to the Senate. He's a Queen's Counsel and towers well over six feet.

The many friends of Mrs. Weir McLure are pleased to see her home again after being a patient in the Kings County Hospital.

On Thursday evening, August 27, a large number of friends from Peters Road and Murray Harbour North gathered at the manse to honor Rev. and Mrs. G.D. Hendry prior to their return to Appin, Ont. After a few brief remarks by Mr. Harry Millar, presentation of a sum of money was made by Mr. George Johnston. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in singing and games. Lunch was served by the ladies.

Mr. Leigh Graham, accompanied Mr. Rae Kennedy on his recent trip to Rhode Island with a load of Quahaugs.

The Murray Harbour North School has opened for another year with Miss Lorraine Jamieson as teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. George White of Breveer, Me. are spending a three week holiday at Murray Harbour North.

There was a large attendance at the Missionary Service held in Peters Road Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, August 30. The guest speaker was Miss Mary Nichol of the Ehill Field, India. At the close of the devotional period, Miss Nichol showed some interesting lantern slides of India and her work as a missionary nurse at the Jobat Hospital.

Miss Alice Millar is engaged as grade VII teacher in the Montague school and left recently to take up her duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toomey, who have been spending their holidays in Peters Road guests of Mrs. Toomey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Beaton, have returned to their home in Georgia.
