Maybe The Athletic Department Will Finally Recognize Curling

This past weekend, we represented U.P.E.I. at the Atlantic Inter-collegiate Curling Championship at Moncton. Although we didn't win, we played our best and finished with a respectable 4-3, win-lose record, good for a 4th position, behind Acadia, Dalhousie, and Mount A.

On the opening day of play, we scored two wins in close competition with Memorial University and University de Moncton. The former, a come from behind victory against a strong runner-up in last years curling championship. In our 2nd game, we ran into a stubborn Moncton squad.

The 2nd day, we opened play with another come from behind victory against last years champions, U.N.B. In the 2nd draw of the day, we made a come back from a 4-0, to defeat Mount A. 6-4. We suffered our first loss in the 3rd draw of the day against St. Mary's University. The game was played down to the last shot as S.M. U. scored 2 to beat us 7-6. At the end of the second day, we were in 1st. place with a 4-1 record. This left us only two games; one against Acadia, the other against Dalhousie. Both of these teams were one game behind us.

The final day's competition saw us struggle against Acadia & Dalhousie. Both of these games were played right to the last shot. Unfortunately Acadia won 5-3 & Dal. won 6-4.

But Mrs. Hollis Sharpe had to smile about the incident anyway, as it turns out, the thief probably reached into the bag and got a handful of "doggie-do"

Fifteen Year - Old Cracks Computer Security

London, U.K. - The phone freaks of a few years ago seem to be giving away to a new generation of whiz-kids...the computer freaks. The New Scientist reports that a fifteen-year-old schoolboy from London has successfully cracked the security system of one of the biggest time-sharing computers in England.

The schoolboy, named Joe using a school terminal, was able to gain access to top secret information from various big businesses, and even to change the data in the computer, without anyone being the wiser. According to the report he was able to do this with only four months computer training.

The computer people later acknowledged that Joe was in a position to completely take over the entire system, cutting off other users, changing the passwords, even altering the bills sent to costumers. Once he'd completely mastered the system he wrote to the computer service and confessed what he had done. A new security system was immediately introduced.

Pickpocket Jailed for not Wearing Mittens

LOS ANGELES - A pickpocket has been jailed on charges of not wearing his mittens.

Timothy Mack was arrested by this week for violating his probation. Mack, it turns out, has been arrested on a nuber of previous occasions for pickpocketing.

Judge Richard Hatden, eventually grew tired of sending the light fingered criminal to jail so he set up special probation conditions for him.

Hayden ruled that Mack would be able to spend his days out of jail on the condition that he always wore mittens in public. What's more the judge said, the mittens must not permit the "independent movement of the fingers".

Mack's freedom came to an abrupt end when police spotted him, with his hands bare allegedly following a woman witha wallet. As a result, Mack is back in jail awaiting a new sentence from the judge.

Bridge Dedicated

MACAO - Government officials in the Portugese colony of Macao - in the South China Sea - proudly dedicated a brand new $8 million dollar bridge last weekend stretch- ing from the mainland to the island of Taipa, but motorists crossing the bridge were dismayed that they ahd to turn back when they reached the other side.

It seems that no one had bothered to build any roadson the island.

ADAI - Seems there is really no honor among thieves. A bronze plaque commemorating the US' first train robbery - by the nations greatest outlaw - was stolen last weekend from a historical site near Adai, Iowa.
