

APATHY HITS BUSINESS SOCIETY

It is with a good deal of sadness that I take up my pen this week. This year I have constantly voiced my belief in the superiority of Business students over virtually everyone else on campus. I really believed that we had successfully generated a pride in our program which in turn generated plenty of spirit, and willingness to get involved, and to help out. Obviously, I was wrong. Apparently the mere fact that we are centred in our own building on campus does not mean that our overall attitude is any different - we're every bit as apathetic as the rest of the student population.

At time of writing, (2:00 p.m. Tuesday), five nomination sheets have been turned in for a possible seven positions. What is even more fortunate is that the five candidates who have demonstrated interest are all running for different positions. What is even more fortunate is that the people running are extremely capable, and would probably have been the best people for the positions in any case.

The following five positions, therefore, have been filled by acclamation:

President: Brian (Gus) Gaudet

Vice-President: Emmanuel Amobi

Treasurer: Lori Mullins

Senior Rep.: Ivy Hender

Junior Rep.: Marg Huising

Two positions thus remain unfilled. They are: Secretary and Sophomore Rep. It is possible that by the time this story reaches press, these offices will also have been filled, and if so, probably also by acclamation. To the five people already elected, and the two who will eventually join them, I offer congratulations, and gratitude on behalf of this year's executive. Also, on behalf of the Society itself, thank you for caring enough to get involved.

To everyone else: this column will go to print after the party to be held Wednesday night. I hope you will have enough spurt to at least show up and collect your free beer, taking advantage of the opportunity to wish your new Executive the best of luck.

See you next week.

BERNARDINE HALL 1978 BROOMBALL CHAMPS

by TURTLE

Bernardine third floor (who won their first game last week) took on Blanchard Hall (who have only lost one game) in the finals of the girls intermurals broomball tournament on Wed. 22.

Vince Mulligan the intermural director said that this final game was the best game of the season.

Blanchard scored early in the game and Bernardine was never able to come back, (although they gave it a hell of a try). The final score was 1-0 for Blanchard.

We would like to thank all the participants of the tournament. We would like to give special thanks to Vince Mulligan, because without him intermurals would not be possible.

Ron Taylor

Dear Editor,

This letter is directed to the Southport Catholic Womens League, and the letter they submitted to you in the last edition of the U.P.E.I. SUN.

They referred to the ad in your last issue concerning prophylactics as, and I quote, "trash and trivia" and attacked it further by questioning the moral fabric of the students of U.P.E.I. In response to this all I can say is that "never in my university days have I ever been confronted with such a closed minded or prudish attitude, as that conveyed in the letter."

There type of attitude toward the very real issue of sexual relations should have no part in an institution of higher education. If they wish to continue in there approach with regard to the use of prophylactics, I wish they would confine themselves to Southport and keep their moralistic tendencies where they belong, which is certainly not within the realm of university life. We are open minded people here at U.P.E.I., and we don't need you, or your league, to make our moral value judgements for us.

Open your eyes and maybe you might see that you are no longer living in a society hung-up on nineteenth century morality.

Dear Editor,

Having been among some of the "chosen few", to attend the Deans Supper, I must honestly say that it was the biggest disappointment I have had since coming to U.P.E.I.

Realistically speaking it was a farce and all it did for me was to encourage me not to make the so-called privileged "list" again.

I will not elaborate on the grim details of the rather lengthy and empty evening but I will say this; those of you who the grade and who did not attend the grand fiesta, you didn't miss anything, and I hope you enjoyed your McDonalds meal, it was surely better than ours!
