Editor Sees Canada Council Leaning Towards Academic

OTTAWA (CP)—H. R. Percy, editor of the Canadian Author and Bookman, has accused the Canada Council of leaning unduly towards the academic in its support of Canadian letters.

He told an Ottawa branch meeting of the Canadian Authors' Association that no doubt the council "is simply playing safe" but this is one field in which timidity and excessive prudence can only defeat all endeavor.

"The patronage must be bold, positive, and as imaginative as the work it would beget," he said. "Some way must be found —and found soon — to underwrite the creation, as well as to facilitate the study, of works of Canadian literature."

The Author and Bookman is the publication of the Canadian Authors' Association.

Mr. Percy said one thing in 1963 that did not make for rejoicing among the writers of Canada "was the shabbiness of their treatment by the Canada Council."

GROSS IMBALANCE

The Canada Council report for 1962-63 showed a gross imbalance between the support given to music and the performing arts on the one hand, and that given to literature on the other, he said.

"It also shows that, while the council is zealous and generous in awarding scholarships for people to study literature, it is miserly beyond belief in its measures to encourage the production of literature."

He said the council report showed $17,825 was given directly to creative writing and, as far as he could see, only $13,000 of $57,225 awarded to the "arts" for purposes of publication, could conceivably provide any stimulus to creative writing.

"It will be seen, then, that with the direct grants to creative writing and the support of literary magazines, the share of the $1,600,000 (Canada Council) pie that the makers of Canadian literature actually get to eat is about $30,000."

DOESN'T AGREE

Commenting on Mr. Percy's address, A. W. Trueman, director of the Canada Council, said he did not agree with the charges.

He said the applications that the council gets from authors for grants are "far, far fewer than in other cases." What the council had accomplished in distributing funds was a fair reflection of conditions under which it operated.

"We have done indirectly more than he gives us credit for," said Mr. Trueman.

He said a possible reason behind Mr. Percy's criticism was that the Canada Council has never given grants either to the Author and Bookman or to the Canadian Authors' Association.

"We have steadfastly refused to give them grants because all the major authors we have consulted have recommended against it," Mr. Trueman said.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

QUIZ

Partner bids One Diamond, next player passes, neither side vulnerable. What would you now bid with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠98643 ♥AQ2 ♦J5 ♣Q72
2. ♠KJ7 ♥AJ9 ♦Q83 ♣AJ85
3. ♠Q95 ♥AQ84 ♦6 ♣AJ743
4. ♠Q854 ♥7 ♦QJ942 ♣KQJ
5. ♠AK3 ♥KJ84 ♦Q952 ♣AK6

1. One spade. Many players labor under the misapprehension that such a suit is not biddable, and they might therefore respond with a notrump rather than a spade. This position is not tenable because it could easily result in a failure to find the best contract.

Thus, if partner has any three spades, the suit becomes playable, and yet it would probably not be discovered if the response were one notrump. The aim in most hands should be to reach for a major suit contract rather than a notrump contract.

2. Three notrump. This response shows 16 or 17 points, notrump distribution (usually a 3-3-3-7), and strength in the three unbid suits. It is by no means a signoff bid; on the contrary, the jump to three notrump shows at least mild interest in a slam if partner has values in excess of a minimum opening bid. It differs from a two notrump response (13 to 15) only in point count.

3. Two clubs. The best way to show that the clubs are longer than the hearts is to bid them first. The intention is to bid two hearts over the expected two diamond rebid, and thus apprise partner that the hearts are only four cards in length. If you responded to the opening diamond bid with a heart and later bid clubs, partner would have no way of knowing that the clubs were greater in length. This would place too much strain upon partner's meager powers.

4. One spade. The hand is too weak to justify a three diamond response and too strong for a raise to two diamonds. As usual in such cases, a side suit is named before showing support for partner's suit.

Of course, the Q 8-5-4 cannot be classed as a sturdy suit, but it is better to misrepresent the spade holding than it is to misrepresent the value of the hand by bidding two or three diamonds.

5. Three clubs. The jumpshift shows at least 17 points and announces a decided interest in a slam. The hand is too good (19 points) for a direct leap to three notrump, since partner is not prepared to bid over this response.

It is unusual to jump-shift with a three-card suit, but no better bid is available. Note that the suit chosen is clubs, not spades. This makes it possible, if partner raises clubs to return to his suit, diamonds, in the same bidding level.
