A STORY OF HOPELESS LOVE.

Death of Rev. John R. Thompson

Recalls a Sad Romance.

EVERETT, Washington, Feb. 26. b. 1899.
Sir.—Enclosed please find an extract from the Seattle Post Intelligencer, which some of the friends of the late John R. Thompson, late of Prince Edward Island, may find interesting. Knowing him personally, I can but reiterate the many kind things the press of this state has to say of him.

I am yours truly,
PERCY H. PALMER.

The story of hopeless love that endured through all the years of a strong man's life and made death's call at last a most welcome one, is told by Clarence B. Bagley of Rev. John R. Thompson, chaplain of the Washington volunteers, whose recent death in Manila caused such widespread sorrow in this state. Few knew the secret heartache he carried to the end, nor understood that his cheery, helpful, hope-inspiring attitude towards his fellows masked a great grief, as bright flowers would conceal a grave. It is one of those rare stories of a constant devotion which could not be uprooted and must thrive and bear the bitter fruit of disappointment. Mr. Bagley was an intimate friend of Rev. Mr. Thompson's, and speaking of him yesterday said:

"The kind words that have appeared in the press of the state and particularly in the Post Intelligencer regarding Rev. John Thompson have been very grateful to me. Few knew him better than I. His death came to my household with a sense of social bereavement. My wife and I, while not members of the Presbyterian church, had held sittings there in Olympia for years, and when he arrived we were among the first to greet the new pastor and were members of his congregation for nearly fifteen years.

"A warm personal friendship soon grew between us and continued with no interruption to his death. He was an irascible and welcome visitor to my household. I met him in every-day business affairs; by turns we worked together or opposite each other in political affairs, though seldom was the latter the case.

He was an able, fearless, studious, eloquent minister, whose Christian life and work was not clouded or marred by his participation in business or public affairs. He loved his fellow man, and his virile strength of body, great brain and large heart were all devoted patiently and conscientiously to the spiritual and bodily welfare of his fellows.

"Soon after his arrival in Olympia he became acquainted with a lady whose family was then and still is among the best and leading ones of the state. She was a lovely woman, of a mild and retiring manner, with a kind word and cheery smile for every one, and had the love and regard of all who were fortunate enough to meet her. The friendship that soon was cemented between them on his part ripened into love, and as was characteristic with him in all he did, his whole heart and soul were in his love. Whether his love was reciprocated only the heart of its object will perhaps ever know, but his wooing failed and after a few years their lives drifted apart. Neither he nor mutual friends ever attached any blame to her or him. She either felt that she did not love him well enough, or that she would never marry him or any other, and had remained single, and during all these years their friendship endured.

"In later years my wife and I asked him why he did not marry. We told him there were good and noble women from whom he could select a loving wife; that he was domestic in his taste; that his pastoral work and his own life would be bettered by such an alliance, and those arguments in a similar vein. For an instant tears glistened in his eyes and he replied sadly that what we urged might be true, but that he has loved one woman and should ever love only her, and unless she could be his wife he should go on to the end alone.

"Few there were who could have realized that the man who was so full of life and so ready with kind words and deeds, and who seemed to have no thought save for the welfare of others, was one for whom the future contained no promise in this life, and that locked in his heart was a load of hopeless longing. That he ever wished for death to come to end his unavailing sorrow I do not believe, but that he met his death courageously and with few regrets I am sure. She who was ennobled by this lifelong, manly, God-like love will shed many tears in his memory.

"Whether his body shall lie in this far-away isle, where the palms throw their stately shafts heavenward and the orange blossoms and tropic flowers scent the air, or, as I hope, it shall be brought back and laid to its rest at the capital city of the great state in whose service he lived and died, under the shadows of the great mountains he loved so well, with the tall evergreens singing their endless requiem over him, the spot should be marked with a fitting monument bearing its appropriate and enduring testimony to his good life and work. This will not be required to perpetuate with thousands of the present generations the loving memory of all those grand qualities that go to make a Christian gentleman."

THE DAIRYMEN'S MEETING.

FIR.—I am glad to note that at last you have given publicity to the rude treatment accorded Mr. Dillon by Premier Farquharson at the Dairymen's meeting in Kindergarten Hall on Friday evening last.

I was one of those present and noticed the cowardly attempt to stop Mr. Dillon when he had only been speaking about ten minutes, and only after he had been earnestly called on by the farmers with the approval of the chairmen. But the farmers very properly resented the treatment accorded Mr. Dillon by refusing to allow the business of the meeting to proceed until he had asked them to do so assuring them that he would finish his address later.

No doubt the reason that his address did not suit the Premier was that while speaking regarding appointment of an inspector he strongly advised the dairymen to appoint their own man, free from government control. This, of course, was against the Premier's principles, and Mr. Dillon had to be cald off. But the farmers, knowing he was their best friend stood by him and sat on the Premier. Unless the latter is rather hide bound he must have felt sore to find out his unpopularity among the farmers when, as he remarked, it had cost such a large amount to get these meetings up. Mr. John T. Weeks, one of the three invited delegates from Alberton complained that it cost them $15.00 to attend the meeting and that only one was allowed to vote. I trust the next time the Premier attempts to run a Dairymen's Convention that he will learn to treat people with common courtesy.

I notice that the Guardian comes to the Premier's rescue this morning and incorrectly states the facts of the case. Mr. Dillon did not speak at considerable length advocating the claims of a certain person to be appointed inspector, as incorrectly stated; any unbiased person in the audience knows well that on that particular point Mr. Dillon had not spoken over two or three minutes.

Premier Farquharson was not responsible for the conduct of the meeting, as the Guardian incorrectly states; but the chairman, whom he personally appointed and whom he afterwards ignored when he attempted to stop Mr. Dillon had charge of the meeting and on the refusal of Mr. Dillon to stop when called on it was sufficient time for the Premier or any one in the audience to interfere. The Guardian thinks it was quite right for the Premier to interfere. What else could it do but uphold its party friends? It is only in accord with its sentiments on the new Davies mail coach service from Aalac to Cape Tormentine.

The Governorship.

Sir,—I notice a letter signed "Western" in the Guardian, a few days ago, also one in the Pioneer of previous date, advocating the claims of Hon. Angus McMillan for governor,—all of which I am sure must meet with general appreciation. Now, sir I have very little to add to the opinion of previous writers. But, if loyalty to party for a lifetime, faithful public services, honesty, integrity and popularity, both in public and private life, combined with the necessary qualifications to fill the position, are recommendations, I think he should be the man.

Who has done more to build up our western capital than the Hon. Angus McMillan? Following up the good work begun by the late Hon. J. C. Pope, Summerside has risen to what it is today through the impetus given it by the many ships built by him, as well as by the large shipments of grain and other produce during the many years he has been in business there. I presume the hon. gentleman is too modest to push his claims; but I trust his friends will see that he is not overlooked in making the appointment.

PRINCE COUNTY.

Although a very busy man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has found time in which to write a great book of over a thousand pages entitled, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English, or Medicine Simplified." Few books printed in the English language have reached so great a sale as has this popular work, over 680,000 have been sold at $1.50 each. The profits on this enormous sale having repaid its author for the great amount of labor and money expended on its production he has now decided to give away, absolutely free, 500,000 copies of this valuable book, the recipient only being required to mail to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., of which company he is president, 31 one cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, and the book will be sent postpaid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. It contains 1008 large pages, and over 300 illustrations, some of them in colors. The Free Edition is precisely the same as that sold at $1.50 except only that the books are bound in strong manilla paper covers, instead of cloth. It is not often that our readers have an opportunity to obtain a valuable book on such generous terms, and we predict that few will miss availing themselves of the unusual and liberal offer to which we have called their attention.
