WHAT WOMEN WEAR.

White taffeta silk trimmed with lace and tulle is a combination for a summer ball gown.

Peau de soie in white or a brilliant red makes the most fashionable shirt waist of the moment.

The downfall of fancy waists, unlike the skirt, is not yet, if conclusions can be drawn from the many indications of their continued popularity.

The bodice with long points is seen again among the evening gowns, and it is a very welcome fashion for the women with short waists and a stout figure.

Pique suits are to be very much worn later in the season, and are in the usual coat and skirt style, in the sailor costume with a blouse waist and sailor collar.

Cordings in various sizes are revived again, and a novel use of them is on the bodice of a changeable taffeta silk gown, where large cords are set in up and down 1 1/2 inches apart.

Irish cambric, well covered with applied designs of yellow lace, is used for wide collars on thin cotton gowns and is combined with chiffon for vests and for waists with chiffon underneath.

In belts there are narrow ones of leather in green, brown, gray, tan, black and white. The very latest novelty has an exact imitation of a harness buckle in gold, silver, leather covered or plain enamel.

Jaunty little capes which reach just below the point of the shoulder are made of three overlapping frills of accordion plaited black chiffon with three satin stripes on the edge sewed on black net or taffeta.

The stock collar has blossomed out in all colors and is tied in stiff, narrow bows, like a man's tie; in a soft, wide one, which is more feminine, and in a full fledged four-in-hand, which covers quite an expanse of shirt waist.

A good example of one of the extravagant fancies in dress is a hat, parasol and neck ruche to match for which you can pay $90. One color prevails in this elaborate trio and red and heliotrope seem to be popular shades.

Hats are trimmed very high on one side. Brilliant flowers, and many of them, are used in the trimming and are worn well tilted over the eyes. The Frenchwoman follows the extreme of this fashion and almost conceals the tip of her nose under the brim of her hat. —New York Sun.

CRUEL SCIATICA

Lacerant Pain—Tormented—Racked—Life Despaired of.

John Marshall, Varney, P. O., Co., of Grey, writes these strong words: "For two years I was completely laid up with sciatica. I doctored without any permanent relief. I had given up hope. A friend saw the notice of a cure of what seemed a parallel case to mine, by South American Rheumatic Cure, and knowing my little faith in the efficiency of any remedy, he procured a bottle himself and brought it to me. I took it, and, to make a long story short, it saved my life. In a day or so I was out of bed, and in three days I was able to walk to Durham, a distance of four miles, to purchase another bottle. I am now entirely cured." For sale at Dodd's Medical Hall, and by Geo. E. Hughes.

Hot Milk as Nutrient.

If any one doubts the nourishing properties of milk, let a test be made of the following preparation of it: When very weary or weak from exhaustion, heat some milk to the scalding point, until a thin skin begins to wrinkle upon the surface, and then drink it as hot as possible. It refreshes almost instantly and restores the exhausted vitality to a surprising extent as soon as it is taken. It is more nutritious than any of the beef teas made from meat extracts or that made from fresh beef.

KIDNEY WAR

How insidiously it Wages, but how Quick the Surrender; and how the flag of truce is Hurriedly Hoisted when that Great General, South American Kidney Cure, Turns Its Guns on the Disease.

This is what James Sullivan, of Chatham, Ont., writes: "For years I was a great sufferer from kidney trouble. The disease became so acute that I was confined to the house, and was greatly afflicted with insomnia. I was persuaded after using many other remedies without relief to procure a bottle of South American Kidney Cure. I had relief almost from the first dose. I have persisted in its use, and after using six bottles I am well and strong again. I can work fourteen hours out of twenty-four and feel very little, if any, fatigue. It is the best medicine I have ever used." For Sale at Dodd's Medical Hall and by Geo. E. Hughes.

FIGHT FOR A BIRDHOUSE.

Flycatchers Driven Out by Bluebirds. Wrens the Final Victors.

"One spring," said a lover of birds, "there came to a birdhouse in my garden a pair of great crested flycatchers. I had a dozen birdhouses scattered around. This particular one was about a foot square, with a peaked roof and a chimney at each end, a doorway for the birds to go in and out and a couple of anger holes bored through the back to give the house light and air.

"This birdhouse, the summer before, had been occupied by a pair of bluebirds, who had left their nest behind them. This nest the great crested flycatchers pulled apart and threw out of the house, every twig and straw. They cleaned the house out completely and then they brought in everything new and built a nest of their own and settled down comfortably for the summer.

"But in a few days a pair of bluebirds came along, and they made for this house. It might have been the same identical pair of bluebirds that occupied it the summer before. I don't know about that, though I have no doubt that robins and other birds that have been south for the winter, hundreds of miles away, do come back in the spring to the same places and to the same trees. Anyhow this pair of bluebirds wanted that birdhouse, and they were ready to fight for it, and that is what they did. The flycatcher is a nice little bird and a pretty plucky sort of a fighter, but not a match for the bluebird. They had a grand round up inside the house, and finally the bluebirds pitched the flycatchers out, and later they pitched out every stick of furniture that the flycatchers had brought in, cleaned the house out entirely and then brought in fresh material and built a new nest according to their own ideas, and they settled down for the summer.

"Well, a few days after that a pair of wrens came along, and they took a fancy to that particular birdhouse, too, and they sailed right in and tackled the bluebirds on the spot. You couldn't see the fight from the ground, but every now and then you could see a straw or a feather shoot out of the front door of the house. The bluebird is a good, sound fighter, but the wren is a better one, and the upshot was that the wrens fairly put the bluebirds out and took possession of the birdhouse themselves. And then the wrens did just what the others had done. They pitched out every scrap of stuff in the birdhouse—just tumbled it out of the door, to fall on the ground—and then they brought in new stuff and built a nest for themselves.

"Nobody molested the wrens. They staid there and raised their young there, and in the fall they all flew away and left the birdhouse again deserted for the winter." —New York Sun.

LADIES WHO STOLE.

Strange Tales Are Told of Our Ancestors of Washington's Time.

We naturally have a very exalted opinion of the aristocracy of our country and can scarcely be convinced that the ladies of society in the early days of independence conducted themselves in any but the most dignified manner. Indeed some of their descendants would feel highly elated to know that they in any wise resemble their supposed courtly ancestors. It is to be hoped that they are not kin to the personages referred to in the following complaint:

One of our early statesmen actually complains that "between tippee beaux and fashionable belles an honest fellow will stand a good chance of being fleeced by the politest tissue of mistakes conceivable. The gentleman will help himself very casually to your hat if it is better than his, take up your umbrella with the most absent air imaginable, bear off your loose coat without once perceiving his mistake and pick up your gloves, 'they so much resemble his.'"

And now for the ladies' part in this proceeding:

"The lady will borrow your penknife, very accidentally put your pocket handkerchief into her muff or playfully take your ring from your finger or breastpin from your bosom, all as innocently as though it was the very thing you called upon her for, so that between ladies and gentlemen you will stand a good chance of being turned out, stripped of all your possessions, according to the newest rules of etiquette." —Philadelphia Press.
