

Garfield & Odie

So, did everyone enjoy National Fat Week? Odie and I sure did. But to tell you the truth, chocolate eclairs for breakfast every morning can become monotonous.

O.K., now that we got all you girls nice and fat we're going to spring the bad news on you - If your legs can pass as tree trunks you cannot wear miniskirts! I am really sorry but it's the truth. Now we don't mean to be critical - Lord knows we wouldn't want to be that - but when Odie and I go to some of these pubs we just can't stop from laughing. Like, when a girl walks by looking like two ton Hussy wearing a miniskirt that doesn't come close to the dimples in the fat of her knees what is one to do?

Now, we know that miniskirts are "all the rage" (they're going out of style everywhere else but just coming to P.E.I.) and it's nice, if not a necessity, to dress in style; however one must also dress according to their weight.

Of course you should never take abuse from people wearing a mini skirt, especially if you aren't a candidate for the "save the seals" campaign. I now I've had a few troubles when I wore my little fur miniskirt out. If some jerk says something to you simply say "Buzz off sweat sock breath". Or if he starts coming on to you let him buy you drinks all night and when he asks you if you want a drive home at the end of the night say "Drop dead sucker". And if he gets a little too persistent you can always pour brew over his head to cool him off (this measure is a little drastic and can affect your popularity with the guys.)

So there you have my feelings on some of the fashions of UPEI. I'll have to admit I'm a little partial when it comes to bowties and cardigan sweaters though. I sometimes attach a bowtie to my flea collar, and of course it's great fun tying Odie's ears under his chin(I hate when he drools on me while doing this.) If anyone is curious just who the alias Garfield and Odie are, we are the ones wearing bowties all of the time and asking everyone if they've read this column. Of course you will never identify us from this because we would never admit to writing it.

Well, Happy Saint Patrick's Day students and may all of your professors get sick during exam week.
