Some Montague-Georgetown Damage

On the Montague-Charlottetown highway on the north side of Montague, the barn of Mr. Atwood MacDonald was blown into the position shown above.

Front of Daniel Martell's home at Georgetown. The damage above was at least partially caused from debris blowing from the roof of Mr. James Llewellyn's home across the street.

Bristol

A big tree almost a foot through crashed on the lawn on the farm property of Chester McCarthy, but no one was hurt. A well house was also twisted around and buckled quite a bit.

Another barn near by on the farm of Mr. Peter Dunphy, was a victim of the gale and crashed down. No animals were injured in any of the crashes as most animals were in the fields.

Mr. Ed Henneberry reports a barn on his farm a short distance away from the others also torn down in the twister while a porch on the vacant house of Mr. Len Kane was torn off and landed up side down by the house.

A mighty tree crashed at the home of W. T. Coffin and fell directly across the main telephone lines tearing the wires down a short distance from the central office.

The spire of the Bristol United Church was seen swaying in the gale and it was feared the lofty spire would come down but it weathered the storm.

Mr. Ambrose McMillan, a retired railway man in Portland, Maine, was here for the week-end guest of his nephew, Rev. Phalen McKenna.

Miss Geraldine O'Brien has returned to the city to attend Notre Dame Convent.

Mr. J. J. Dunphy leaves this week to follow up his studies at Holy Heart Seminary, Halifax, N. S. Mr. Dunphy spent the summer in the West.

Vacation time comes for us all and the scribe puts the typewriter away this week and leaves on vacation for the next two weeks.

Mr. P. R. Sinnott has returned to work as a carpenter on the Falconwood job after a weeks lay off while the contractors took over the job from the government.

The severe storm on Saturday night did a great amount of damage in this vicinity. A 60-foot barn on the property of Mr. Ambrose Phalen, was torn to pieces, the roof landing in a field while one end of the building crashed into another machine building and crushed it also. Another end of the big barn landed near the house while boards and shingles were scattered all around the yard and field. A good amount of hay in the barn stayed in a solid heap on the remains of the barn floor as the loft was torn away.

A large hen house on the big farm of Eph Malone was stove in and in the teeth of the storm, the men feared to enter the building to save the hens. Despite the fact the building was wrecked, only one hen was killed, several trees on the church grounds that adorned the lawn were torn and split in two and shingles were ripped from the barn while a brick garbage burner was blown away.

Mr. John Laybolt, merchant here, is having his house moved from Dundee, to the highway beside his store this week.

Heavy Storm Damage At Georgetown

Hurricane Edna hit Georgetown late Saturday night and early Sunday morning, with the heaviest winds in the memory of the oldest citizen.

At 12:15 p.m., the roof was completely blown off the home of Mr. James Llewellyn on Water Street, as the wind roared across the harbor. Mr. Llewellyn, who had only returned from the Prince Edward Island Hospital earlier in the night, was reading in a downstairs room, his wife and family having retired for the night, when he heard what he thought was a clap of thunder and on going upstairs and from there proceeding to the attic found that the whole of his house roof had been blown off. The roof in different sections was blown across the street striking and snapping off a telephone and high tension electric light pole directly across the street from the Llewellyn home, had the windows and window sashes in the front of the house smashed in by portions of the flying debris. Mr. Martell, a partial invalid was sleeping in the down-stairs front room at the time. Another section of the roof was hurled across the street and smashed through a large plate glass window in the store of J. J. DeLory and Sons.

Windows were also broken in a vacant house, owned by Mr. Howard Fouchere, who now resides in Souris.

Men were immediately on the scene and the occupants of the Llewellyn and Martell homes, as well as those in the home of Mr. P. J. Henry, were taken to neighbours. The damage to the high-tension wires resulted in brilliant illumination and for a time there was danger of persons coming in contact with live wires.

An electric light pole was also snapped off further east on Water Street. Numerous trees were blown down in the town. Fishermen put out extra lines to their boats.

At one time three fishermen had to form a human chain by catching hands to stem the fury of the gale and proceed along the shore. Several trees on the church grounds that adorned the lawn were torn and split in two and shingles were ripped from the barn while a brick garbage burner was blown away.

Mr. John Laybolt, merchant here, is having his house moved from Dundee, to the highway beside his store this week.

Georgetown Man Lands 5 Pound Trout

Although only two days are left in the fishing season, there is still a big chance to land the best trout of the year.

On Sunday Mr. Bill Fitzgerald of Georgetown tried his luck on the Morell River and came home with a 5 pound salt water trout, the catch of the year.

The lovely trout was 30 inches long, 12 1/2 inches in girth. Playing him in a narrow space, Mr. Fitzgerald had to use every skill at his command to bring him in, and after a real battle the trout finally gave up the fight.

Mr. Fitzgerald was using a nine ounce glass rod with garden hackle as bait.

Queen Wharf communications remained intact in the section of the town north of Water Street but the town was cut off from electric power all day Sunday and until a late hour at night.

Linesmen from the Maritime Electric Company procured poles at Charlottetown and worked all Sunday afternoon and until a late hour at night. Many citizens remained up all night and men patrolled the streets, in case of any further damage occurred.
