

Fishermen Of Halicarnasus Acts Out The Drama Of Paul

By HAL McCLURE

EPHESUS, TURKEY (AP) — From the rim of the ancient amphitheatre the old man down in the arena appeared as a tiny, lonely figure among topped stone, weeds and rubble.

Waving a walking stick like a boozing bandmaster he began in a rumbling basso to echo the chant of the mob who shouted down the missionary Paul near the same spot almost 2,000 years ago.

Great as Diana of the Ephesians, then in some subtle, indefinable way was transformed into a model of saintly gentility, despite a black beret out ragedly slanted over stringy, white hair.

One could see St. Paul, proudly erect and militantly preaching of a crucified Christ greater than the Ephesians' own beloved Diana.

Moments later the old man assumed the role of the influential town clerk scolding the crowd for its rudeness and then finally silencing it altogether with threats of monetary fines.

"To the silver smiths of Ephesus," said the old man in a loud stage whisper, "the pocketbook was the only thing that mattered."

FAMED FOR LEARNING
Acting out this one-man drama of Paul among the Ephesians was one of Turkey's famous men of letters, Cevat Sakir, better known to fellow Turks and countless tourists as the Fisherman of Halicarnasus.

Novelist, poet, historian, teacher, admitted ham actor and sometime-time guide Sakir took his fisherman nom de plume after his exile to Halicarnasus more than 30 years ago.

His one real mission as a guide is to "reach of the rich historical, archeological and scenic wonders of his native Turkey—Asia Minor—which has to be really discovered by the tourists, as Greece, Italy and Spain have been.

"Democracy, my friend," the Fisherman will say, "existed in Asia Minor before it did in Greece."

Sakir and the editor of a weekly Istanbul newspaper for which they wrote were exiled to Halicarnasus, or Bodrum of modern Turkey, by the Ataturk government for their political writings.

Taking the nom de plume of the Fisherman of Halicarnasus which described his occupation at the time, Sakir began to write the stories and articles that soon made him famous.

He remained at his beloved Halicarnasus long after his exile was lifted.

History unfolds as the Fisherman conducts you to some of his favorite spots along the Turkish Aegean.

He points to a small hamlet of land offshore and says it is Gortyn, where a youthful Julius Caesar once was held for ransom. "Caesar refused to return and crucify them," says the Fisherman, "and he did just that."

One can almost smell the sulphurous fumes at the temple of Apollo at Didyma, where one of the most famed oracles of the ancient world held court. Says Sakir:

"King Croesus used to come here but he preferred to patronize the oracle at Delphi. At least he did until he asked if he should make war again. Cyrus and the Delphic Oracle answered that if he did it would destroy a great empire."

"No one told old Croesus that the oracle was often ambiguous. Croesus warred against the Persians and, true, a great empire was destroyed—Croesus'."

Police testified Anstey was president of the West Indies Hospital Funds Limited, a private company incorporated by the Barbados government last year to operate the West Indies hospital sweepstake to raise funds for a new hospital.

Detective James Flesher testified sweepstake tickets, printed by the British American Bank Note Company and exported under bond, were seized Oct. 23 from Anstey. Other sweepstake documents were found on De Vita.

PARIS (AP)—Joseph Joanic, who sold scrap metal to Nazi occupiers of France in the Second World War but at the same time helped smuggle downed airmen of the Allies back to England, died of a stroke Saturday in his Paris apartment. He was 62.

Fines Levied In Lottery Tickets Case

TORONTO (CP)—Earle Anstey, 53, and Vincent de Vita Jr., 34, both of Toronto have been convicted of conspiring to dispose of lottery tickets on a sweepstake run by the company of which Anstey is president.

Both men were fined $6,000 or sentenced to six months in prison. They had pleaded guilty.

Students Ask Abolition Of Monarchy

OTTAWA (CP)—A resolution asking for the abolition of the monarchy by Canada was passed Sunday at the annual meeting of the Canadian University Liberal Federation.

The resolution, proposed by the Liberal club of the evening division of Sir George Williams University and seconded by the University of Western Ontario group, was passed 36-29 on a show of hands.

It said the governor-general of Canada should be the sole head of state.

Text of the resolution: "Be it resolved that, in due respect to Her Majesty the Queen of the British Commonwealth and of Canada, the present and future monarchs be no longer recognized hereafter as the official monarch of Canada and the governor - general of Canada, present and future, be hereafter recognized as the sole autonomous head of the state of Canada."

This was identical to a resolution passed last month by the Ontario University Liberal Association.

Immediately after passage of the resolution, four Western Canada universities combined to issue a statement denouncing the move.

Delegates from the University of British Columbia, the University of Alberta, Brandon College and the University of Saskatchewan said in the statement:

"The measure advocating replacement of the Queen by the governor - general as head of state passed at the CULF convention was presented at a time when only 15 to 18 clubs out of 42 were represented.

"This does not constitute a quorum and the Western University Liberal Clubs are unanimous in their refusal to recognize this resolution as a CULF policy."

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of the Associate Committee of the Forest Fire Protection of the National Research Council agreed more and more forest fires are being set by children.

Several members suggested the increase was caused partly by showing color films of burning forests to young audiences.

Cases of children setting fire to forests after watching such movies were cited by members. The children wanted "to induce the entertaining spectacle of aircraft roaring in to drop water on the flames."

A. W. Braine of the Manitoba mines department was re-elected committee chairman for another term at the final of the three-day sessions.

The committee approved forest fire training programs for Indians now under way in several provinces. They said these provided a dependable source of manpower to fight fires and gave employment to many who otherwise would have trouble getting jobs.
