LONGFELLOW AT HOME.

A correspondent, writing from Cambridge, to an exchange, says the poet Longfellow lives in a large, square, wooden house, with nothing especially attractive about it. It stands back from the street, its front in full view, looking over Charles River. Near it, at the side, a few trees and bushes relieve the open space. This is the house known as Washington's headquarters; and here, for many years, has lived Henry W. Longfellow. The house seems full of him. The spacious rooms are finished with unostentatious luxury; elegant literature is freely strewn about, pictures, engravings, and miscellaneous works of art adorn the walls and grace the mantels. The library, on the second floor front, expresses the occupant. It is a large, sunny room, filled with books in all languages, that seem to have fallen into their places at the bidding of the muses. Here sits the poet. Mr. Longfellow was always a poet to look at—in form, feature, and expression, a poet. Lawrence's portrait, engraved for the small blue-and-gold edition of the poetical works, gives an admirable idea of his head and countenance in his finest mood—though not in its domestic aspect. Since the fearful death of his wife the outward man of the poet has altered much. The step is less buoyant than it was, the bearing less joyous, and the look less elate. The florid man has matured into an exceeding meekness of dignity. Ripe and rich looking he always was—exquisitely neat in dress and exquisitely elegant in person—though always animated by a suspicion of foppery. But now he has attained a wonderful completeness of expression. His aspect is that of a bard in the full affluence of his years, and the full wealth of his genius. His silvered hair is long and wavy. His beard grows white and thick beneath his chin, looking more like a deep lace ruff than anything else. His voice is melodious as an organ, and his features, handsome as ever, have been touched with new lines by the action of thought and sorrow. His manners are very beautiful to all persons, and carries about him that indescribable atmosphere that marks the perfectly cultured gentleman.

A SAD HUMAN WRECK.

The Cairo (Ill.) Democrat tells the following melancholy story: Many of our citizens have seen a poor, half-crazed, middle-aged woman wandering about the city, generally carrying in her hand a tin cup and a painted toy bucket. She is poorly clothed, begs what she eats from servants of hotels and restaurants, or from the snack rooms that abound so plentifully along the levee. We have been told that this poor creature, now an object of pity and charity, formerly lived in the State of Arkansas, in comfortable circumstances, commanding by a quiet, industrious life, the respect of the circle in which she moved. In the year 1861 she was engaged to be married to a young man of the neighborhood, but the war assuming enlarged proportions, and involving nearly every able-bodied man of the South, her "affiance" joined the rebel army, under McCulloch, and at the battle of Pea Ridge was horribly mangled and killed by a cannon ball. This woman, actuated by a simple but strong devotion, followed the army, and at the close of that terrible conflict, visited the battle field, where she found the ghastly and mutilated corpse of her lover. With a wild, piercing shriek, she cast herself upon the bloody body and clung to it with a caressing fondness that forced tears to the eyes of more than one of the rough and hardened lookers on. The blow shattered the poor woman's intellect, and from a mind evidently never very well balanced, the light of reason fled forever. Since then she has been a purposeless wanderer, destitute of nearly every womanly attribute—a wreck of human nature pitiable in the extreme.

ALLEGED PIRACY IN HAYTI.

A late American paper says that while the schooner Lucy, belonging to New York, was lying becalmed, about the 4th inst., 25 miles off Cape Delmarin, on the eastern point of Hayti, a suspicious craft was observed at some distance. With an awning over her stern and the men lying upon their oars. Captain Coop thinking it desirable to keep a sharp look out upon this boat, proceeded himself to the mast head of the Lucy, in order that he might have a good view of her. At one time he saw three men in the boat, at another time he saw five men in her. But he had reason to believe that there were many more lying on the bottom. He kept a vigilant lookout. At night he observed from the masthead a light in the same direction in which he had previously seen this boat. He accordingly mustered his men, armed them against any emergency or surprise, and directed that a strict lookout should be kept throughout the night. At 11 o'clock same evening there was an alarm given, that an armed boat was below the bow of the Lucy. The boat was challenged but no reply was given. It was, however, observed that a dexterous attempt was made to board the schooner, but the first man upon her side was shot dead by Captain Coop's revolver. The second vessel had his head split open by the mate. A volley was speedily fired with deadly effect upon the pirates, by the crew of the Lucy, and in a few moments afterwards the besieging boat was seen pulling away from the schooner's side as hard as she could while the crew continued their fire, but by morning nothing was seen of the pirate boat or her crew.

MARSHAL O'DONNELL.

An English paper announces the death of the Duke of Tetuan, which occurred recently at Biarritz, where he had been sojourning during the summer and autumn months. It is unfortunate that so brave a soldier who brought so much honor upon the Spanish arms in the field, and who did so much good for Spain in the Cabinet, should have died, to some extent, in exile. Leopold O'Donnell, departing from the particular role of his ancestors, took the part of Isabella in the war of succession that ensued upon the death of Ferdinand VII., and distinguished himself highly during that long and arduous struggle. By his valor as a soldier, he won the highest rank in the Spanish army, as well as his dukedom and grandee ship in the brilliant campaign against the Moors. As a statesman and Prime Minister of Spain, he conferred upon his country solid advantages which far outweigh the glory he won for her as Commander-in-Chief. When he became Premier, Spain had really no fleet, and the army was so disorganized as to be worse than useless. Spain has now a respectable fleet and a powerful army. It was also in his administration that railways were introduced into Spain and other means adopted for developing the great industrial resources of Spain. He belonged to the Progressionist party, but held aloof from their revolutionary plots and anti-dynastic designs.

HUMBLED SPICED WITH ROMANCE.

The N. Y. Tribune gives an account of a little Fenian craft, called 'The Hope of Erie,' whose supposed cruise was, on Tuesday night last, made the subject of a lecture, in New York, by one Col. S. E. Trevelian, her engineer. The original name of the vessel was 'Alice Davis,' where and of whom she was purchased is kept a secret. She is 30 feet long, 20 feet wide, and 9 feet in depth of hold. Her burden is only half that of the yacht 'Henrietta.' The bark was commanded by Capt. Kavanaugh, the expedition by Gen. Kerrigan. Her cargo was 5,000 pistols, or, as the speaker mysteriously said, 'rat-tail files,' and 2,000,000 cannon balls, except 'sugar plums.' The first adventure the little ship had narrowly missed being lost, as in a foggy night she was nearly run down by a three-masted, Coming into a part of the ocean known as 'the forties,' she and her crew had very hard times, but after some rough-and-tumble experience, a calm followed, and a dance followed on the limited quarter-deck. On the thirty-fifth day out, the Black Rocks were seen; on the thirty-eighth they made the shore of County Mayo, Ireland, and lauded Col. Dougherty and Mr. McShea, who travelled inland to give news of the friendly arrival. Hovering around the coast, the small expeditionary force demonstrated that it was possible to land men and arms into Ireland, despite the vigilance of the English forces. Among the gentlemen who departed were Col. Pendergast, Col. Phelan, and Col. Devine, who have since arrived safely in this country. After the expeditionary party had spent some time on the coast, and effected several narrow escapes from capture by English war vessels, it was found that a rising of the Fenians was then impracticable, and the crew reluctantly determined to return to America laden as they started, as such a large quantity of ammunition could not have been concealed from the British police. On the way back they suffered from scarcity of provisions and water. On the 78th day of the voyage a whale, much larger than the little bark, was so near it that it spouted water into the faces of the crew, and could be reached with a broom-stick. A few days afterward a battle between whales and swordfish was observed. The opposing forces were drawn up in echelon, and exhibited a military skill and precision in their manoeuvres, unsurpassed by the tactics of General Grant. Colonel Trevelian, at the close of the address, was treated to rounds of applause.

[This is undoubtedly the same Colonel Trevelian, who in 1864 and '65, by palming himself off as a refugee Southern cavalry officer, imposed upon the sympathies of genuine Confederate refugees, and swindled various residents, tradesmen, and hotel keepers in St. Catherine's, Hamilton, and other places in Canada.]—Hx Unionist.

GARRIBALDI'S SON.

Menotti Garibaldi, who has been figuring as the spirited Commander-in-Chief of the Italian revolutionary forces during his father's imprisonment at Caprera, is but 21 years of age. We came across the other day, in a book published in 1858, a series of autobiographical sketches of the elder Garibaldi's life, translated by his friend and admirer Theodore Dwight. After his proscription in Italy in 1834, he went to Brazil, and before long was suddenly engaged in assisting the struggling republic of Rio Grande. He married while there, amid the perils and hardships of war, the heroic Anica, who, in September, 1840, became the mother of Menotti. The boy was cradled in danger. When but 12 days old he was carried along a toilsome march made desperate by storm and famine. For days the water flooded the plains, was up to the bellies of the horses, and, crossing the rivers, the father swung the little bundle of humanity in a handkerchief which he tied round his neck. The earlier years of his life were all thus passed in an atmosphere of war and tumult, and his father's subsequent career has left him little leisure to do otherwise than to follow and study. What wonder that his name and blood have made him early an actor in the stirring scenes of Italian revolution.—N. Y. Times.

We copy the following paragraph from a late London paper received by the last mail:—

"We read in the Calcutta Indo-European Correspondence of the 5th ultimo that on Wednesday night, October 2nd, a telegram arrived from Bombay, asking if any Catholic priest from Calcutta could be spared to join the Abyssinian expedition in quality of military chaplain. An answer was at once despatched the same night, placing the services of the Rev. Father Adrian Goffinet, at present military chaplain at Fort William, at the disposal of the Government. No reply has yet been received to this offer, though it was stated in the Bombay telegram that the chaplain was to be in readiness to start with the expedition from Bombay on the 10th instant. It will be a hard race to get to Bombay in five days. Another Catholic chaplain is to be supplied from the Bombay mission. We are happy to add that it was the Governor in Council of Bombay himself who applied to the Bishop of Bombay for Catholic chaplains. The appointment of the Rev. Father Goffinet is an admirable selection.

A COOL HUSBAND.—There is one sensible married man in this country. He is a soldier, and was reported to have been killed, but was only a prisoner. He returned home to find that his wife had turned over a new leaf in the marriage service, and that another man occupied his seat in the chimney corner. Did he go to work slaughtering the false wife and new husband? Not much. He walked in and said—'Well, old gal, how is things?' 'Putty good, Bill,' said the double married woman, not taken aback greatly. 'Which do you prefer, the old or new love?'—She hesitated for an instant, and then said:—'I don't like to hurt your feelings, but—but—' 'Oh, spit it right out. Don't mind my feelings nor the other chap's! I won't be angry if you come down a little rough on my vanity. Count on me being amiable. I won't cut up rusty if you should go back on me.' 'I'm glad you're so thoughtful, Bill; and I acknowledge that I do like my present husband best; but if anything should happen to him, I know nobody else I would so soon join fortunes with again as you.' 'That's the way to talk. I know bid you good bye, hoping that no accident will happen to the other fellow, and that he will live long to enjoy your delightful society. Good day!' And the careless husband travelled off, with his knapsack on his back, whistling, in cheery clear tones, 'The girl I left behind me.'—American paper.

The Cape Breton News states that there were three funerals at Sydney Mines on Sunday, 10th inst., and two on the following day—in all five burials in two days. Three of the deaths occurred on the 8th.

RICHARD J. CLARKE. ALL CURES MADE EASY BY HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts and Old Wounds. No description of wound, sore or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst case readily assume a healthy appearance whenever this medical agent is applied, and fresh sprigs up from the bottom of the wound, inflammation of the surrounding skin is arrested and a complete and permanent cure quickly follows the use of the ointment. Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation. These distressing and weakening diseases may with certainty be cured by the sufferer themselves, if they will use Holloway's ointment, and closely attend to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all obnoxious matter will be removed. A poultice of bread and water may sometimes be applied at bedtime with advantage; but so scrupulous cleanliness must be observed: If those who read this paragraph will bring it under the notice of such of their acquaintances whom it may concern, they will render a service that will never be forgotten, as a cure is certain.

Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia.

Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and subduing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills. When used simultaneously they drive all inflammation and depravities from the system, subdue and remove all enlargement of the joints, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstances, if the use of these medicines be persevered in. Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases. After fomentation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, by the simultaneous use of the Ointment and Pills. But it must be remembered that nearly all skin diseases indicate the depravity of the blood and derangement of the liver and stomach consequently in many cases, time is required to purify the blood, which will be effected by a judicious use of the Pills. The general health will readily be improved, although the eruption may be driven out more freely than before, and which should be promoted; perseverance is necessary.

Sore Throats, Diphtheria, Quinsey, Mumps and all other Derangements of the Throat

On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as said is forced into meat; this course will at once remove inflammation and ulceration. The worst cases will yield to this treatment by following the printed directions. Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands. This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more effectual than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofulous nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach and bowels being much deranged, require purifying medicine to bring about a cure. Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

- Bad Legs, Chillsains, Fistulas, Skin-diseases, Bad Breasts, Chiefo-foot, Gout, Sore-throats, Burns, Chapped Hands, Glandular swellings, Scoury, Bunions, Corns (Soft), Lambeago, Sore-heads, Bites of Mosquitoes as Contracted and Piles, Tumors, Sand-dies, Stiff Joints, Rheumatism, Ulcers, Coco-bay, Elephantiasis, Scalds, Yaws, Wounds.
