WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Irishtown WI To Donate Quilt To Homeless Family

KENNINGTON — Mrs. Harold MacLeod was hostess of Irishtown WI recently with eleven members and one visitor present. For the "Thought" a poem entitled "The Name" was read. Roll call was answered with a household item. Sick and school visitors reported. The treasurer's report was read and the year was raised by card parties and a fund-raising party. Correspondence was read consisting of several Thank-You cards, and the Christmas gifts were acknowledged by Mrs. Reid. It was felt that the district has exceeded its goal for the church, hall and school. A plainly marked, also the mail boxes. A report was given by the meeting held recently at Kennington regarding hand-crafted covers being held this season. The secretary was asked to order cross stitch samples for the members taking part in the competition for the annual meeting in July.

A letter was received from the Home and School Association asking to contribute towards the High School banquet, and $200 was voted for the purpose. Donations were asked for a party sale to be held in the Jesseome store on Friday, February 22 in aid of the High School. It was approved that a quilt on display be sent to a family who recently lost their home by fire. Two donations of remnants were taken by members to be made up into articles for an auction sale which will be held later in the month with a Valentine party.

A discussion followed on wash, and painting the community hall. Mrs. Borden, Co. in speech, and Mrs. Leigh Paynter were asked to contribute to the president in getting this project started by March 15. The members appointed were: Mrs. Archie Johnson, Mrs. Clayton Shaver and Mrs. Donnie MacLeod.

Following the National Anthem Mrs. Harold MacLeod conducted a flower contest in which Mrs. Leigh Paynter won. Lunch was served by those in charge.

MARY HAWORTH Daughter Worries About Mother's Reading Habits

Dear Mary Haworth: I wish you would help us with a ticklish situation. In the last five years mother has been reading avidly. As soon as the morning paper is delivered she is reading every reading matter (magazines, etc.) that comes in the mail. She reads in the afternoon. We take two evening papers and during the evening she reads and doting by turns until bedtime. Then she is awake and reading again.

I am 20 and my sister is 24. Both of us are married. We would like to get home, no matter how late we stay out. She used to wait up for my brother, too, because she got home, no matter how late we stay out. She used to wait up for my brother, too, because she got home, no matter how late we stay out. She used to wait up for my brother, too, because she got home, no matter how late we stay out.

Dear P.S.: The ages of the children, as listed, plus your usual reading and only just a few past five years, suggests that the probably has an innate love of reading and only just got around to it (or back to it) after the children were more or less raised. However, her minute examination of the evening papers and the usual reading and only just a few past five years, suggests that the probably has an innate love of reading and only just got around to it (or back to it) after the children were more or less raised.

As for what you can do, if you think you might encourage her to read, you have a diagnostic test. First, the child is reluctant to sit for glancing information, possibly related to the child's reading. It is causing confusion and a bias towards disinterest. A pattern of inattention is being formed, which is essential to reading. It is causing confusion and a bias towards disinterest. ## "A Clergyman's Life" Topic Of Address To Branch "B"

Rev. Louis Ellis was guest speaker at the recent business and devotional meeting of Branch B of St. Paul's Church. He also read a thank you note from Mrs. Ellis for "the very first shaver ever given to her". Mrs. Lillian Marley, president of the CNIB Auxiliary, read a letter from the group of White Canes and that the new CNIB Centre on Grafton Street is open at all times.

Most important, the diligent continued, he must be diligent in prayer and have time to get apart to listen to God. Regular duties include daily services and parishioners. Mrs. Noel H. DeBolis, president, thanked the speaker. She also reminded the members of the annual supper meeting of the Protestant Welfare Bureau special drive for articles to be sold at the Neary New Shop.

Mr. and Mrs. N.R. Little of St. Eleanore West Royal Hall, were special drive for articles to be sold at the Neary New Shop. Mr. and Mrs. N.R. Little of St. Eleanore West Royal Hall, were special drive for articles to be sold at the Neary New Shop.

place that would prove to be a challenge indeed to a younger man. "So you walked?" I have heard Jamie, eldest grandson say to him of this habit. "I will learn to save yourself! Couldn't you be content? I'll have a nice quiet afternoon to rest!" We'd manage here. "Walking" I am a world smile "is only pleasant exercise! I never was happier than when I was following the team in a field. There was nothing pleased me more in the farm."

Active. James keeps. And busy as usual in the farm. A marked milestone, reached on his way. A year older. Yes. Hat a bit whiter. Sometimes an odd complaint heard, of a "crick" here or there. "Somewhat lonelier, we often think, now that so many loved ones, kin and friend have been busy as usual in the farm. We speak of them. We keep their memories ever green. And in an intriguing conversation for faces now gone from our lives and a living, we have the grandchildren. And also the other young."

"I think I will go now" he said. "I have to take that trailer of manure to the field, and on then to take care of the things at the other place—I reckon not too slippery to let those cattle go down to drink at the stream today? Then I'll get in the woods."

"Yes" I am a world smile "is only pleasant exercise! I never was happier than when I was following the team in a field. There was nothing pleased me more in the farm."

ofers of now, the green shoots of names we have long known, the little lads so interesting, in whom we see, sometimes with a chuckle "the very image" of some grandfather, forerunner; the demure little girls of whom we agree "her grandmother will never be dead so long as she's alive!" So James is a child of February. Born in a room of this old house, come to be a blessing to it, on a bygone winter-morning of rain.

This Anniversary saw a cool sunny winter-day, the sun from which we now must part. Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.
