

tactics to imitate the screech of the hawk, while he is hidden in a thicket, and, having thus driven away the parent birds, proceed to desolate their home. The nest is built in a tall tree and is of the same loose structure as a Crow's. The eggs also are dark olive-green thickly speckled.

Francis Bain, 1891
Birds of Prince Edward Island
