MEN DROWNED—Two young men were drowned at Paulamond, Cape Breton, recently—Lee Boudrot and Henry Boudrot. They were out in a dory gunning, and had a sail set. A squall struck them and they were thrown into the water. They struggled hard for life, but before help came they were drowned.

GUESSING COMPETITIONS.—Recorder McCoy, of Halifax, is to furnish Mayor Keefe with an opinion on the legality of guessing competitions started by tradesmen who offer prizes to successful guessers. The case under consideration is Scovil & Page, who offer a bicycle. A late despatch says the Attorney-General has pronounced the competition illegal, and it is understood that Mr. McCoy will coincide in this view.

EXPORTS TO ENGLAND.

An Important Item That Is Not Mentioned In The General List.

In the latter part of 1893, says an article in the Manchester, Eng., Times, the good barque Tamar E. Marshall, commanded by Capt. W. J. Scott, left the port of St. John, N. B., Canada, for Liverpool, where she arrived in due course. In her cabin she carried the pioneer consignment of the great Hawker remedies, and thus marked an era in the progress of medical science in this country. After alluding to the Hawker remedies as the greatest success of the country, the article quotes the testimony of four well known persons residing in different parts of the country, one a leading clergyman in Cheshire, recommending in the highest terms Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, Hawker's liver pills and Hawker's balsam of tolu and wild cherry. It further says: "The supply of these remedies brought out by Tamar E. Marshall was soon exhausted and a fresh supply cabled for. The second consignment came by the Allen line steamer Mongolian, and was used up within six days after reaching this country. Other consignments have followed in natural sequence, and a large stock is now held to meet an ever increasing demand." Thus the marvellous success that attends the general introduction of the Hawker remedies in Canada has been repeated abroad, and is the most significant proof of their unrivalled value. The Hawker remedies are manufactured by the Hawker Medicine Co., St. John, N. B., Canada, and are protected from fraudulent imitations by letters patent in Canadr, England and the United States. These standard remedies comprise the following: Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, Hawker's liver pills, Hawker's catarrh cure, Hawker's tolu and wild cherry balsam, Hawker's pile cure and Dr. Manning's german remedy.

HERMIGILD AT THE LYCEUM.

THE dramatic club of St. Dunstan's College presented the Tragedy of "Hermigild, or the Two Crowns," to a large audience in the Lyceum last evening. "Hermigild" gives one a very good idea of the manners, customs, and dress of the Visigoths and Romans of the sixth century, and the manner in which it was put upon the boards last evening was in every way creditable to the young gentlemen taking part and to those who instructed them. The costumes in each case were historically correct, and the thrilling scenes and incidents in which the play abounds were cleverly enacted. The tableaux were good, especially the one at the close of the fifth act. While all the characters were so well sustained it is perhaps invidious to single out any for special mention, but we cannot help referring to the splendid manner in which the part of "Leovig, King of the Visigoths" was taken by Mr. P. F. Doyle, and the excellant rendition of the parts of "Hermigild" by Mr. P. D. McGuigan, "Count Sisbert" by Mr. J. T. Bryenton, "Count Goswin" by Mr. G. Gaudet, and "Roderick" by Mr. J. H. Bradley. Between the Acts the College Glee Club rendered several choruses, and the orchestra furnished instrumental music.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE SCOTT ACT.

"How small, of all that human hearts endure,
That part which laws or kings can cause or cure."

SIR,—The Hon. D. Farquharson, who occupied the chair at the Opera House on Monday night, would, I have no doubt, refuse his assent to my motto. He would compel to sobriety by legislative enactments. The power of public opinion, the will of the majority, as expressed by law, should, and must, prevail. In other words, minorities must yield to this great force. "God help us," he said, "if the anti-Scott Act supporters gain the victory on the 19th." The answer to prayer being regarded by some very excellent men as a purely subjective phenomenon, he might have improved the occasion by adding to his supplication, "and grant us the grace to meet our disappointment with fortitude and Christian charity." The chairman's theory as a legislator and moral reformer would elevate and improve one class, while the rest of his fellow mortals might lapse into utter degradation. The unfortunates who will not, or cannot, conscientiously, follow him and the majority who know the liquor traffic to be an evil, convict, fine, imprison, disgrace. To all this, allow me just to say, 'tis what the whitecaps did the other day when they turned out en masse and banished all the unfortunate Jews from Troy, Ala. Does Mr. Farquharson and the clergy who endorsed him really believe such a course to be in harmony with the spirit of the gospel which they profess to believe and teach? It breathes a very different spirit. So does Goethe when he sings this pious hint on toleration:

If God to men were as severe
As you and I are, when we jar
We both had scanty comfort here;
But he takes men as they are.

Allow me to call the attention of your readers to the following from Stuart Mill, he "who brought honor to England, and whose place none can fill":

"Even in those portions of conduct which do affect the interests of others, the onus of making out a case lies upon the defenders of legal prohibitions. It is not a merely constructive or presumptive injury to others, which will justify the interference of law with individual freedom. To be prevented from doing what one is inclined to, or from acting according to one's own judgment of what is desirable, is not only always irksome, but always tends, pro tanto, to starve the development of some portion of the bodily or mental faculties, either sensitive or active; and unless the conscience of the individual goes freely with the legal restraint, it partakes either in a great or in a small degree, of the degradation of slavery."

But the Scott Act advocates do not recognize the fact that minorities have any rights of conscience.

The words of Sir Auberon Herbert, uttered a few years ago, through the Times, spoke the sense of the British nation, and our political aspirants here should "make a note of it." Anent Prohibition and Scott Act, he says: "All great state systems stupify; you cannot make the state a parent without the logical consequence of making the people children. Official regulation and free mental perception of what is right and wise do not and cannot co-exist. I see no possible way in which you can reconcile these great state services and the conditions under which men have to make true pragress in themselves."

From the moment of reading Mill and Herbert, I, for one, am delivered from the bondage of Neal Dow! The fanaticism of his adherents can touch me no longer.

UNEARNED INCREMENT.

The Best Definition Yet!

If, because of our enterprise and fine Factory plant, we are able to sell an article worth FIVE DOLLARS for FOUR DOLLARS, or furnish a house with Furniture worth TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS for only ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY DOLLARS, has the Government any right to step in and claim this difference of ten per cent. between the COST and ACTUAL VALUE of the goods, and by Act of Parliament say to our customers: "This is the people's money; you will have to account to the Government for it." We don't think so. More anon.
