My Baby was a living skeleton; the doctor said he was dying of Marasmus and Indigestion. At 13 months he weighed only seven pounds. Nothing strengthened or fattened him. I began using Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, feeding it to him and rubbing it into his body. He began to fatten and is now a beautiful dimpled boy.

THE BITTER BITTEN.

My uncle, Sir Charles Weatherings, was a gentleman who owned a large estate in Berkshire, and was very much respected by the people of his neighborhood. He was kind and intelligent to his tenants, many of whom would sacrifice their lives at any time to be of service to him.

At this time, in England, sectarianism was very much looked down upon by the Episcopal church, and as the Reverend Mr. Caldwell was a rigid Episcopalian, my uncle's plan of appointing my uncle's estate to the vicarage was a terrible trial to the vicar.

Of course this piece of magnanimity was not intended to be a reward upon his head the everlasting thanks of the whole denomination. The work was commenced at once, and was soon completed, under the care of the vicar.

A brilliant young minister was duly installed in the new church, and soon became the spiritual light of the district over which he presided. He was a bright, handsome young man, and had the good fortune to be unmarried.

My uncle had a family of sixteen children, three of whom were daughters. The youngest was by far the most beautiful, and was her father's favorite.

But the course of true love never did run smoothly, and the present case was no exception to the general rule, for Maud was already betrothed to one of the wealthiest young men in Berkshire.

"My dear, it is now time for you to name some definite day for your wedding," her father said, in a very coaxing tone. Maud was puzzled, but was too wise to say or do anything that would give the old gentleman room for suspicion.

"Humbly! Care and trouble! A sensible woman should never talk in that way. Your mother was married when she was eighteen, and never regretted it, I flatter myself. Now, Maud, this is all nonsense, for you to desire further delay."

"What is to be done?" she asked herself over and over again, but in her grief she could see nothing but darkness and misery. At last a faint hope broke in upon her troubled mind—she would see her lover, and tell him all that had passed between herself and her father.

The meeting between the lovers that afternoon must have been satisfactory for Maud, returned to her father's house quite flushed, and evidently happy. She did not appear at the breakfast table next morning, and her maid, being sent to look for her mistress, returned with the awful intelligence that Maud was not to be found.

The moral lesson to be derived from this story of my uncle's life is a warning of how easily a man may destroy his own happiness by seeking to injure his neighbor. Now Look Out For the Dealer who has something just as good as Scott's Sarsaparilla or the bottle larger or the price cheaper.

IN THE TREATY PORTS. A Canadian Product Favors in the Land of Confucius. The medicine was first introduced by Canadian and the increase in its use by Europeans and natives is attributed first to the accounts of its success in the Canadian and American newspapers, many of which are received in Shanghai and other ports, and later to its established efficacy in curing all kinds of kidney diseases, which are very prevalent in the country.
