Found Kaiser Self-Centered Blustery Man

(By Thomas T. Osampson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, April 19—When the Crown Prince grew up and became Kaiser the unusual traits as a youth that made jests on his visits to his grandmother, Queen Victoria, provoked more serious entertainment as pertaining to Emperor Wilhelm III of all Germany.

Here is an interesting extract from the diary of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Randall Davidson, one of the shrewdest judges of men and their motives. His Grace met the Kaiser on the Imperial yacht at Cowes.

"I found him most agreeable and genial, very odd and opinionative, full of himself and his doings, full of the glory of the German army and navy. He had been preaching on board that morning, he said, but the sermon was mainly written by his Chaplain-General, only he altered it to suit his congregation of sailors by 'tearing out all the dogmatic trash.' Those were his words!"

And words, he it noted, addressed personally to the head of the Anglican hierarchy!

On the last of these yachting trips to English waters the Kaiser caused the Prince of Wales (Edward VII) intense annoyance through the inclusion of his naval escort of two new cruisers, the Worth and the Weissenburg. Both vessels were named after places in Alsace where, in 1870, the invading Prussian army had won conspicuous victories over the French. On the anniversary of the battle of Worth, which fell during the visit, the Kaiser made on board the cruiser of the name a bellicose harangue to the sailors. The Prince denounced his nephew's provocative utterances as an affront to his hosts.

Replied to Victoria

To hark back a little. The English royal family were incensed at the young Kaiser's treatment of his English-born mother directly after his father's death. The Empress Frederick was kept by him virtually a prisoner in her German palace. His father's body had scarcely gone to the grave before he proposed making a round of visits to various European courts.

"How sickening it is to see Willy, not two months after his beloved and noble father's death, going to banquets and reviews," wrote Queen Victoria to the Prince of Wales.

"Why does he go to Copenhagen? I am sure your parent-in-law will not receive him with open arms, although they must be civil."

To his "dearest Grandmama" the Kaiser replied to these admonitions: "I deem it necessary that monarchs should meet often and confer together to look out for dangers which threaten the monarchical principle from democratical and republic parties in all parts of the world. It is far better that we Emperors keep firm together than that two of them should go pitching into one another without any earthly reason except for a few villages mors or less."

A year later the German ruler flatly refused to meet the Prince of Wales in Vienna. This created a thorough scandal and it required a tremendous amount of tact all round to prevent something worse developing. The Kaiser had conceived a grudge about the Prince stantly grumbling about the Emperor's "not treating him as an Emperor." Queen Victoria recorded her opinion of this grumble pretty frankly to the Prime Minister, Lord Salisbury. "This is really too vulgar and too absurd as well as untrue to be believed. We have always been very intimate with our grand-uncle and nephew and to pretend that he is to be treated in private as well as in public as his Imperial Majesty is perfect madness. If he has such notions he had better never come here."

The Kaiser probably never committed an indiscretion which more effectively roused the anger, not merely of his English Royal relatives but of the whole British nation, than when he sent his notorious telegram of congratulation to President Kruger, of the Transvaal Republic, at the time of the repulse of the Jameson raid. The publication of this telegram very nearly ante-dated the Great War by some 20 years.

The Prince of Wales considered the telegram "the last word in insolence and malicious meddling." "Do give him a good snub," wrote the Prince to his august mother, expressing also the hope that he would never see this German nephew again at Cowes. Shrewd Queen Victoria knew better than to retort with a snub. Her letter was the more crushing because she told Wilhelm, "for his good," that he had been very unwise. "William's faults," wrote the Queen to her eldest son, "come from impetuosity as well as conceit. Calmness and firmness are the most powerful weapons in such cases."

His august English relatives were not particularly pleased at the Kaiser's insistence on attending Victoria's funeral, and he embarrassed them by remaining much longer than was necessary. Edward VII however, made his nephew a Field-Marshal and bestowed the Order of the Garter upon the Crown Prince. The Kaiser also came to England for the funeral of King Edward. He visited Westminster Hall, where the dead monarch was lying in state, in company with King George.

The last time the Kaiser visited England was in May 1911, when the great Memorial to Queen Victoria in front of Buckingham Palace, was unveiled by King George. The Kaiser, in shining helmet and breastplate, stood at the head of the marble steps, his gaze sweeping the length of the tree-lined Mall.

Exactly seven years and six months later, on Armistice Day, the Mall was filled with captured guns, and the Kaiser was in flight from his capital.

Mr. Joseph MacAulay of Charlottetown was a weekend visitor in Cardigan Road, the guest of his family.—P

Paper is thinner, envelope large, ink brighter. Colored inks come in—colored note-paper go out.

Many of the Lorne Valley people who were friends of the late Mr. Robert Curran regretted to hear of his death. He was an aged and highly respected farmer of Baldwin's Road. Mr. Curran was formerly high sheriff of Kings County. He is a brother of Rev. Dr. Thomas Curran and also of John Curran of Baldwin's Road. Interment St. Theresa cemetery.

On Wednesday evening, April 15th, a large company of friends and neighbors waited on Mr. and Mrs. Percy James at the home of Mr. John Mustard to offer their hearty felicitations to the newly married couple. The bride, formerly Miss Jessie Mustard of Cardigan Head is a popular young lady in this community, and the groom a prosperous farmer of church road. The friends and neighbors presented Mrs. James with a miscellaneous shower of gifts.

Deepest sympathy goes out to Miss Ella Doherty in the recent loss of her father, Mr. Angus Doherty.

Mr. William Finlayson of Bangor is leaving his community to receive work on a vessel.

A bouquet of Mayflowers were picked by Miss Marion MacAulay.

That humorous play entitled "My Irish Dream Girl" was supposed to be presented in St. Theresa on Monday night.

A very enjoyable entertainment and dance was to be presented in Cardigan Hall Monday evening. Webster's orchestra was to be in attendance.

Mrs. Angus Nicholson and Miss Ruth MacDonald were recent visitors to Montague.

The people of Lorne Valley and surrounding districts were taking advantage of the sleigh roads by hauling home some more of their summer's wood.

Mr. and Mrs. George MacEachern of St. Peters road were recent visitors to Lorne Valley.

Lorne Valley And Vicinity

Mr. Neil MacCannell of Charlottetown has returned to college after having spent his Easter vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben MacCannell.

Mr. Albert Stewart, Peakes Station, was in Charlottetown on business Thursday, April 9th.

We were very sorry that Mrs. George MacInnis had not been feeling just as well as usual last week. She is threatened with appendicitis.

The regular monthly examinations of Lorne Valley School were conducted by their teacher and the pupils were found to be progressing quite favorably in their work.

Sleighs were again used in Lorne Valley on Monday April 13th. The roads were not blocked but there was about six inches of snow on the level.

Little John Menchin of New Perth spent a few days vacation in Cardigan Head, the guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Rachael MacLeod.

His many friends regretted very much to learn of the illness of Dr.
