Teachers End Session Suggesting Projects

Delegates and guests to the annual meeting of the Atlantic Teachers' Organizations, returned home over the weekend from their three-day meeting at the Vocational Institute in Charlottetown. All agreed that this year's conference was the best since its inception seven years ago, it was reported.

On Saturday after the summary of the various group discussions of the previous day had been presented by Tom Parker, general secretary of the Nova Scotia Teachers' Union, the meeting then dealt with the minutes of the 1963 Atlantic Conference.

A special committee set up by the 1963 conference to investigate problems common to the Atlantic area, gave its report to the assembly. Under the topic of professional development, it recommended three projects.

1. An Atlantic workshop in action research. By sharing costs it should be possible to bring in resourceful persons. The workshop would be held centrally with attendance limited to those selected by the teacher organization.

2. An Atlantic Teacher Organization bulletin, printed locally and bringing news and information for curriculum, research, special projects, being done in the Atlantic region. The editorial board would be one from each province.

3. Promotion of meetings and conferences from time to time in special areas when the need for information, clarification of policy, review of practice is indicated, an example being vocational education.

COMBINE FORCES — The committee believed it was desirable for the four provinces to combine forces and engage a research director for the area. It also suggested that a staff-training workshop or conference be held for all staff members in the four teaching organizations.

The conference agreed on principle to the recommendation of the above committee. However, damage by fire costs more than $3,750,000 a week in Britain, the greatest share of which is borne by industry.

MP Expects No Changes In UK Policy

A resolution seeking an invitation by the Atlantic Conference to the Central Advisory Committee on Education, was passed at Saturday's meeting. The resolution was adopted in Charlottetown later this year.

It was agreed at the conference to hold next year's conference in New Brunswick and to extend invitations to the teaching organizations of Quebec and Ontario.

Mr. Macquarrie, a former secretary of state for external affairs expressed the opinion that the change of government in the United Kingdom would not involve major changes in foreign policy or even in domestic policies.

"The British parties have much in common and their alteration in office does not bring results even when either has a majority more substantial than that now held by Labor," he said.

"Patrick Gordon Walker the new Foreign Secretary is a man of broad background who is recognized as a man of high international stature," said Mr. Macquarrie.

The contest editors last night presented thanks to the more than 800 students from throughout the province who submitted essays.

Following is the winning essay on "Why I Read a Daily Newspaper."

Throughout the years of democratic government the liberty of the press has become perhaps the most valued gift of free nations everywhere. This liberty, the right of every citizen to print what he chooses, has made the daily newspaper a popular and reliable source of vital information.

While there are times when one cannot, or as is often the case, will not, agree with another's personal opinions, the reputation of our newspaper is such that it is taken for granted by most that what they read is undistorted truth. Because of this confidence which has been built up over a period of years, I and sure I'm not, many others read a newspaper.

This, though, is only one of the reasons I read a newspaper. To me, reading a newspaper is an enjoyable experience. In its pages can be found the latest sports and social events, advertisements, comics, and advice to the lovelorn, to mention but a few. A newspaper holds something for everyone.

There are people who would not agree with me when I say I read a newspaper. Only a few names from "I Abner" and "Anne Rooney" and "debates, elections, racial and separatist clashes as news of the United Nations. Surely our great-grandfathers would find it hard to believe how quickly these things reach us. We know of them only a few short hours after their occurrence.

To summarize my answers I would say that I read a newspaper because in doing so I practice a hobby for which men fought since John
