WASHINGTON (CP)—While North America bristles with radar screens, bombers and rockets, some defence department sources believe the great submarine threat may come not from the skies, but from the great and massive department of oceanic warfare. The department of oceanic warfare, which is now being organized, will be headed by a former submarine sailor armed with modern bombs and nerve, germ and chemical weapons.

"We're still not fully equipped to handle this potential threat," said one informant who is still being in having a stiff struggle to bring the department under the control of the Pentagon. "The great and massive department of oceanic warfare, which is now being organized, will be headed by a former submarine sailor armed with modern bombs and nerve, germ and chemical weapons."

In contrast to rumors that the Soviet Union may have thousands of long-range bombers who could be carried to strategic and sensitive areas by an armada of some submarines, the United States is reported to have fewer than 50 submarines. The United States is reported to have fewer than 50 submarines. The United States is reported to have fewer than 50 submarines.

"We could have more more than the Red—if we could convince others in the Pentagon of the great danger and the terrific success of the submarine saboteurs," the informant said.

DETECTION DIFFICULT

Clad in rubberized suits and equipped with flippers, oxygen bottles and a long breathing apparatus, frogmen can operate from the Arctic to the tropics. They are trained to swim more than 60 miles at depths of more than 600 feet.

U.S. Satellite Poised Seen As Bridging

LONDON (Reuters)—The British aeronautical magazine Flight has accused the United States of launching spy-shouldered satellites and practicing "brinkmanship in space." The magazine, Britain's representative in the International Federation of Air Force, said that "politically the parallel with the U-2 is too close for comfort."

Urban Planners Seen Needing New Thinking

OTTAWA (CP)—Planners will have to break out of their ruts and learn to think clearly and boldly if they are to meet the "present sorry state of urban confusion," says S. Mosher, executive director of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, said here.

He told the founding convention of the Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research that planners have to re-appraise their ideas of what makes up good housing, construction of new housing, and the use of public utility services.

ITALY SECRETIVE

In one incident, six Italian frogmen—later captured—damaged two British battleships and a tanker in a single operation in Egypt's Alexandria Harbour last year.

"Italy trained her frogmen to be an elite corps, a highly specialized organization. While they cooperate with us under the North Atlantic alliance, she inclines to be a bit tight-lipped about the full extent of her frogmen specialty. We could use more information from her."
