Open House

Open House at the University will be held on October 22 and 23 during which time some 2000 persons are expected to visit the campus. High School students from all Island High Schools will be on campus as well as students from other Maritime High Schools. In addition, school teachers, administrators and the general public are invited to attend the many and varied displays, demonstrations, exhibits, discussions and sports activities planned for the two-day period. Ian MacDonald, Director of Extension and Chairman of this year's Open House Committee, estimates that there will be 25-30 different stations throughout the campus buildings presenting displays, exhibits and other interesting facets of university life.

Finders Not Keepers

'Since the beginning of the academic year 1971-72, the students at this University have demonstrated an unprecedented degree of honesty', says Alan MacLeod, Director of Security at the University of Prince Edward Island.

To date, on several occasions large and small sums of money have been turned in to the Security Office, which handles the Official Lost and Found Department for the University.

In one instance, a student turned in a sum of $256. which he found on campus. This is not an isolated instance. A short time ago, a professor at the University lost his wallet containing valuable papers and a sum of money. His wallet was turned in to the Lost and Found Department, and he was able to retrieve it the following day.

The Director of Security went on to comment that, 'In these days when young people are so subject to criticism, it is heart-warming to know there is still honesty and character within the student body.'
