WHY I PLAYED ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

"It's a hard game, Pop." I am an old man and I might say, a friendless one. If the world has not dealt kindly with me, I am to blame, perhaps; I have not dealth justly with myself. Nature made me kind. Folly has left me poor. Be patient with me.

Did you ever gamble. Did you ever bet that Nature did not know her business and try to beat her? No? Then thank God that you have much of that, that in a crowd may pass for wisdom—but you have missed a deal of fun.

For myself—for my foolish self—I would rather gamble than eat. I would rather back my judgment on a horse than own him. By the same token I like an honest woman, and a handsome face always warms the cockles of my heart.

But let me tell you.

It was on the day that just precedes the opening of the Lenton season, I passed St. Mary's. That church and others like it had been closed to me for years, yet as a boy I wore the surplice in such a place and swung the censer.

The day was bleak and stormy, the wind showed bursts of speed, while the rain sulked, the elements, to benefit the earth, abused it.

The wind and the rain beat into my mind as well.

With a heavy heart I had left my room in an East side tenement, whose marble window-sills and tiled entrance only mocked the poverty within. Where married life with a shawl on its head, hugging its milkless breasts, stands and shivers in the doorway. At its feet its wealth—a bundle of wood and a bucket of coal—that's all.

As I neared the church, the tones of an organ drove all scenes of squalor and thoughts of poverty from my mind. I stood in front and listened, and through the closed doors, the music filtered to a something I had heard before, but where or when, my old brains could not answer. Suddenly the doors opened, as my memory did, and through the portals pealed the music of a wedding march. I was young again, and manly looking; the world was brighter, and to the self-same measure a woman stepped, as fair as the one I now looked on. I thought of my own "Orange Blossoms," and half wished the dead could answer when I called my wife.

The bride and bridegroom drove off, as "God-speeds" followed them. The music ceased, and with a lighter heart and brighter hopes I made my way to a pool-room.

Ah! there it is! there it is! If one could win back the honesty and self-respect he lost there!

Gamblers, you know, are superstitious, even tin-horn gamblers. They will play to win upon a dream, an incident, a sweetheart's name, anything that in the blind gropings of their hope might touch chance.

I had not yet seen the entries, but the first name my eye fell on as I entered the room was "Orange Blossoms" in the last race. My heart beat high. Visions of a roll of "yellows" with a rubber on, danced before my eyes. A Third avenue table d'hote with wine, beckoned me to sit; the "bubbles" that I wore for shoes were exchanged and in imagination I stood "redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled."

Between myself and all the riches of the earth there was just two dollars and ten cents. Between myself and the Basilisk who made my bed there were just two dollars and ten cents.

Here was a man of good training, fair education, excellent faculties, clinging to such a spar in a sea of selfishness.

The mare was an eight to one shot, and on form had a good outside chance. Would I play the first event and run it up, or play the last and wait?

I could still hear the wind and rain as they beat upon the roof. I thought of my age and utter loneliness, I remembered that though my room was cold and cheerless it was still a shelter. I looked fondly upon my capital and thought out its possibilities, "bee-ands" and "three-offs"—in Park Row. With such material arguments as these I hesitated to play at all. I was not a dead game sport.

Yet the mare had a chance, and a good one; she had won races, had a great pull in the weights, and with a good "jock" up, should win. Besides, did I not see "Orange Blossoms" wearing brackets at the church? What more did I want? And, with such whisperings of hope, rather than the counsels of reason, I shoved my two "bones" through the window, and called without a tremor, "Give me Orange Blossoms." "Sixteen to two, Orange Blossoms," the 'robber' cried; "ten cents commission, please," and the last cent I had on earth was up on "Orange Blossoms." I was now a dead game sport.

"An' I sed to de blokey wat wus talkin', 'dats de winner, See? an' he looked at me," As "Cul" said this to his mate, my eye rested on the legend on the wall: "Beware of Touts and Rats," and I moved to a seat in the rear.

The rain still beat a tatoo on the roof. The hum of voices, the heat and fumes of the place sent me nodding. I could just hear the operator call the first race, "They're off," "Outcast in the lead," "Poverty second," the third horse may have been a "sleeper" for all I know; for that moment I was one myself.

I dreamed I was a boy and at home again, in a land where the honeysuckle and the laurel grew, where the [illegible] sway to their own music and [illegible] is harmony. In a land where men hearts are warm and their own proud; where [illegible] where men wealth is not always worth, and genial sun and air conspire to make kindly people. Down the silent river with the tide, I could hear and see the darkies as they rowed, the movement of the oars beating a measure to their songs. Under the great oaks that mark the avenue to my father's house I passed, I thought, from their giant arms the green moss hung; the festooned parasite swept the carriage tops and dared the sun to rob it of the road. The wilderness beyond was solitude—not the solitude that's found in crowds and built in selfishness.

I know now this was peace; as a boy never realized it. The realities of war and exile had not fixed a standard, nor had the torch been kindled, nor the conquerors yet laid waste the fields or camped where the cotton grew.

I wandered on in the careless manner of a boy. At the turn of the road I could see the great white columns of my home. The place seemed made for welcome, hospitality built it, fellow-feeling filled it.

In the doorway stood the figure of a man. I called him 'father,"—hesitated,—and in an instant the whole scene changed. I had eaten of the fruit of Knowledge. I was driven from the gates of Eden.

Some one shook me as he passed and said: "It's a hard game, Pop." I turned instinctively to the board, and, half dazed with sleep, and rattled with hope, I looked for that which should make or break me. That race had been run; I could see that by the movement of the people. A group of "cigarettes" stood near, and I asked, with a quaver in my voice, "who won the race, boys?" "Misery," one said; "and Orange Blossoms?" I asked, half ashamed. "Orange Blossoms be d——," the whole group cried, "she can't run in the mud." I had forgotten that.

As the "gang" moved out, they began their horse play. One said, as he slapped me on the back: "Play Mucilage to-morrow, Pop, if the track is sticky;" and another: "Back Common Sense if you're foolish." AlSas! I was, I am. With such shallow-pated wit we passed into the street.

It was nearly dark, and the people were hurrying to their homes. The lights of the city came out, one by one, and a heavy mist was falling. Penniless, I stood for shelter in a doorway, as a group of girls from a neighboring shop came by; as they passed, it seemed without a care on their minds, one said: "Why, Tessie, I forgot to tell you, Katie Reilly's sister was married in St. Mary's to-day"—and that was my "Orange Blossoms."

Purposeless, in mean attire, siftless, with all ambitions dead and buried in me, I drifted out. I thought of the woman's handsome face and no longer cursed my luck, of her youth, and forgot my age. I would have drank her happiness, but the "robber" in the room took the "price," but stood with my old head bared to the winter's rain and wished her luck. She had the rail, she looked like a winner, may she always, God bless her, win her brackets in her husband's arms.

Dairymen, Attention

Of the Cheese and Butter Factories in operation in 1894, we furnished, to the satisfaction of all concerned, the necessary apparatus for the following:—Winsloe, Hampton, Tryon, Crapaud, Grand River, Dunk River, Mount Stewart, and Vernon River Bridge.

In the summer of 1894 we made nine Cheese Vats (each holding from 650 to 700 gallons of milk), and two Butter Vats (each averaging 400 gallons of milk); no complaints were made—satisfaction given.

From our large experience in the past we are now better than ever prepared to meet the wants of Dairymen. We guarantee satisfaction, and respectfully solicit the patronage of those who are contemplating the erection of Cheese or Butter Ftories.

Our make of Vats is superior to all others, and our fifteen and twenty gallon Cans are the best and cheapest in the province.

Don't Make Any Mistake

When you are threatened with consumption or lung troubles and get the wrong kind of Emulsion. There is only one perfect, pleasant and effective preparation of that life giving substance and it is Miller's Emulsion. There is no bad taste to this preparation. It is compounded on an entirely new principle, by which the vital energy of the Liver of the Norwegian Cod Fish is retained and incorporated with the hypophosphites of lime and soda, making the most potent blood maker known to science. It has saved thousands of young lives, and is revolutionizing the old methods of consumption treatment. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottles, 50c and $1, at all Drug Stores.

SATISFACTORY REPLIES.

A Marked Increase in sale of the New Specific Remedy.

DETROIT, Michigan, May 20.—City druggists here report a great number of enquiries with regard to the specific remedy for Brights disease, diabetes and all forms of kidney complaint, known as Dodd's Kidney Pills. A partial investigation has shown that in every case the reply of the druggists to the questions of their customers has been highly laudatory to the remedy and that they have been able to cite many cases from their own personal knowledge were the most signal benefits have been derived from its use. The result has been a very marked increase in the number of sales made and several unusually large orders have been given.

No rug, from a sanitary point of view, is more desirable than a carpet in the discussion.

A Caution! A Warning!

If, on blowing the nose in the morning lumps ade flakes are discharged colored with blood, especially on one side, lose no time in applying a remedy. Catarrh of the very worst kind has become seated, the walls are sore and full of small ulcers, and if not soon cured will be hard to cure and eradicate. "A stitch in time saves nine." Use Chase's Catarrh Cure.

In the dining room a stained floor and large center rug will be found more convenient than any all over carpet.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by foreing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ar.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
