"A TICKET TO TOMAHAWK", AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

Dan Dailey and Anne Baxter co-star in the Technicolor special known as "A Ticket to Tomahawk" arriving today at the Capitol Theatre. Another lady, Emma Sweeney, has something to do with it, too, but she can't hold a candle to Anne Baxter, according to all reports. Emma's a train. "A Ticket to Tomahawk" is a new film about the opening of the west that takes a comic view of the whole process. Dan Dailey, whose popularity zooms with each film and after "When Willie Comes Marching Home" can be said to have reached the top, plays a travelling man who becomes the reluctant first passenger on the Tomahawk and Western Railroad's first trip. Rival stage coach operators, not to mention Indians, try to interfere, but Dan, with lovely Anne Baxter as added inducement, gets through. Filmed on location by Durango, Colorado, by Twentieth Century-Fox, "A Ticket to Tomahawk" is authentic to every detail, that goes even for the train. Emma Sweeney, named for her pioneering engineer played in the film by screen veteran and Academy Award winner Walter Brennan, was built for the film just as carefully as the train has ever been constructed for actual railroad use. The biggest royal salute, 62 guns, is fired at London on royal birthdays and coronation anniversaries.
