For over a year past Mr. House was tormented by severe pains in his back, which increased in severity in spite of doctors and their medicines.

He was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. He did so. That night he felt less pain. Daily the pains abated, and in less than two weeks Dodd's Kidney Pills had cured him thoroughly.

A Raise in Salary.

Some years ago Collis P. Huntington's private secretary, Mr. Miles, asked for an increase of salary.

"Do you need any more money?" asked Mr. Huntington thoughtfully.

"No, sir, I don't exactly need it," replied Mr. Miles, "but, still, I'd be glad to be getting a little more."

"Ah—hum-m-m," mused his employer. "Can you get along without the advance for the present?"

"Oh, yes," answered the secretary. "I guess so," and the matter was dropped.

A couple of years later a new boy appeared at the Miles home, and the secretary thought the time propitious to renew the application. "Why, my dear sir," said Mr. Huntington when he heard him through, "I raised your salary when you asked me before."

"I never heard anything about it," said the secretary in amazement.

"Probably not," returned Mr. Huntington. "In fact, I used that money to buy a piece of property for you. I'd just let it stand for awhile if I were you."

Mr. Miles thanked him warmly and retired somewhat mystified. Shortly after Mr. Huntington called him into his private office. "By the way, Miles," he said, "I have sold that real estate of yours at a pretty good advance. Here is the check."

The amount was $50,000. The property was part of a large section purchased by the railway king as an investment for his wife.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Her Begging Scheme.

A respectably dressed old woman apparently in deep distress was noticed standing at the foot of the steps of an elevated railroad station the other day just at the hour when the rush was at its height. The woman had apparently lost something of value. She searched her pockets, shook out her skirts and scanned the ground on every side. Of course it was not long before her distress attracted the notice of passersby.

"I have lost my ticket," she said in answer to the query of a man who stopped for a moment in his rush for the train. "I don't know what to do, for I have not a nickel with me and I live away up town."

The man pulled a string of tickets from his pocket, tore off one, handed it to the woman and resumed his rush without waiting for her thanks. But the woman did not follow. She merely moved across to the flight of steps on the other side. Here she resumed her search, with the result that a nickel was transferred to her pocket by a passing woman. Next she crossed the avenue and gathered some more nickels and tickets from the passengers going in the opposite direction, finally returning to her original stand, where her plight attracted as much compassion as before. While the observer was looking on, the woman made two rounds of the stairs, each round occupying about ten minutes. It is probable that her average earnings were at the rate of $2 in nickels and negotiable tickets an hour.

IN THE WEE SMA' HOURS.

The Story of a Bell and a Very Angry Householder.

It was a tousled and sleepy looking head that popped hurriedly through the second story window. There was a frown on the face and an angry flush in the half closed eyes.

"Who in thunder's there?" was shouted by this forbidding looking presence, totally unmindful of nature's beauty at 5 in the morning. "Who's there, I say?" it repeated in louder and more threatening tones.

There was no answer.

"What do you mean coming around here this time of night and ringing my bell like this? I never heard of such infernal impudence. Get out in the yard where I can see you and talk to you. Say, I'll be down there in about two minutes if you don't tell me what you want."

"Anything the matter, dear?" yawned the sleepy wife.

"I should say there was. Didn't you hear the bell? Rang for five minutes straight. Whoever it is must be either drunk or crazy. Where's my revolver?"

"Don't you think for a minute of going down there with a revolver. It would be terrible if you'd shoot some one. I'll go."

"Indeed you won't."

"Then we'll both go."

Just as they faced the window a curtain shot up at the next house, a dozen feet away, and the pretty young girl who was to take an early train appeared winding one of those round, nickel, loud ticking clocks.

"Why," she laughed, "did the alarm bell disturb you?"

He crawled into bed saying intense things, and the more his wife shook in the effort to restrain her mirth the more he said.
