Coastal Shipping Hearing

Great Britain must secure dollars if they are going to buy Canadian products. As an instance he cited the fact that some years ago, the British taste was for Denmark bacon. "The Canadian bacon has to some extent captured the palate of the British consumer and we would suffer greatly if we were to lose this market, acquired after so many years," he said.

Farm Surplus Items May Go Behind Curtain

WASHINGTON (AP)—Now that world tensions are easing, the United States may try to sell some of its huge farm surpluses to Russia and satellites, officials said Friday.

These government farm officials said they expect the Eisenhower administration to re-explore soon the feasibility of resuming trade with Iron Curtain countries.

CONTRIBUTION TO PEACE

Recent action of Canada in selling surplus butter and grain to Iron Curtain countries.

A third factor influencing government thinking is the administration's desire to find new outlets for the mounting farm surpluses. Russia, because of lagging agricultural production at home, is known to be in the market for grain, butter and food fats—items in the U. S. surplus supplies.

MOUNTING SURPLUSES

Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson announced Friday he will go to Europe this fall to confer with U. S. representatives there and with foreign governments on disposing of farm surpluses. The trip was suggested by president Eisenhower.
