

GAMBLING ON SUNDAY

In keeping with change there will be no variety show, instead there will be a Casino Night Sunday evening in the gym, which will provide more participation for all. This will consist of a variety of gambling tables set up by different faculties and organizations to satisfy everyones latent desires, to take a chance after all life is one big gamble. If you have always had the desire to "Beat the Business Office" this is your chance. This is just one example of who you can beat, there will be more..... Admission will be 50¢ which is exchanged for $500 UPEI Panther Palace

Cash. A Bank will be provided for those who wish to buy more cash if their winning streak has not started with the initial $500. To add to the Casino atmosphere there will be girls circulating to change bills and provide enjoyment for the male voyageurs. Money made on betting may be redeemed at the end of the evening $100 UPEI Panther money equaling 10¢ Each faculty will be out to make their game as interesting and enjoyable as possible as there will be a prize for the game which makes the most money. The money remaining after everyone has redeemed their Panther cash will go to Multiple Sclerosis.

This joint effort by faculty and students will give each individual a chance to come out and show what makes his world go round ($$$) So get your rabbits foot out and give yourself a chance.

CARNIVAL

PRICES

This year the Winter Carnival Committee has decided to forego the tradition of making available passes which can be purchased by the student and will admit the bearer to all events. In place of these passes, tickets to the individual events at Carnival are being sold.

Although unable to talk with the chairman of the Carnival Committee, we did get a reaction from one of the members of the committee. She did not know why passes were eliminated this year, but she was not in favor. She advanced the idea that when two events are going on at the same time, students usually drop in to each for awhile. This is alright when there are passes, but one has to pay the full price for each event under the present system.

During the first two days that the tickets were on sale, the Ball tickets were moving briskly but the tickets to the dances were not selling at all. The students were probably not sure what events they were attending, so they were waiting to buy them at the door.

Reaction to the plan seems to be favorable. Some students' comments when asked the question "What do you think of selling tickets to the events at Carnival instead of passes for the whole thing?"

Norbert Moran: "I like it. I don't think anybody would buy passes. The only thing most people are interested in is the Ball, anyway."

John Dionisi: "It's a good idea. I don't know if they'll make any money this way, though."

Bob McIlhome: "It's a pretty good idea, but the prices are exhorbitant. Two-fifty for an Irish Beer Party?"

Mike Duffy: "I'll like it. I'm not going to most of the things, so it works out better."

Bev Burns: "I think it's stupid. It's too expensive to buy tickets to everything."
