

THE DAILY EXAMINER, AUGUST 5, 1881.

P. E. Island and the N. P.

THAT greater advantage has not been taken of the benefits of the National Policy by this Province, is due not to its unavailability to this locality, as to the fact that the necessary capital required to embark in new enterprises is held by men whose tastes and inclinations do not lead them to the bustle and worry of business.

It is a matter requiring fair investigation whether this Island is not suited for the cotton manufacture. The length of our winters may seem to be against it, but that season of the year is devoted usually to accumulating stocks for the spring and summer trades.

Another industry, particularly suited to this Island would be the manufacture of coarse blankets, horse rugs, &c., for which a market at our doors is provided in the lumber camps of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The manufacture of agricultural implements is one which ought to be largely prosecuted here. The imported iron, of which they are chiefly made, passes our Province on its way to Ontario, pays freight both ways, agents' commissions, etc., before it reaches the consumer here.

In the same way woodenware and carriage material, which from their bulky nature must pay heavy railway charges, are also wholly imported. Of course many of these industries are beyond the means of any one man, but by means of incorporated companies the amounts required could be raised.

Mr. Blake's Visit.

We have called attention to two important omissions on the part of Mr. Blake.

His omission to explain how it is that he finds that the Island has received from Canada over a million dollars more than it has paid into the Dominion Treasury.

His omission to propound definitely a policy in support of which his followers can unite.

We have now to call attention to an important admission:

Mr. Blake admits that there has been a great improvement in the business and trade of the country! How does this admission consist with the prophecies of ruin and retrogression with which Mr. Blake's colleagues and supporters have made Canada hideous?

"I have indicated my views as far as time would permit me. I trust by fair argument to show that the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite (the National Policy) is wrong. If this policy should prove right, and I should live long enough to find that it is right, I should be the first to acknowledge it. But, sir, I believe that this is humanly impossible. Nothing but a miracle could make that policy a success. I believe it is contrary to the laws of nature, and that it is contrary to the beneficence of the Maker of the world. It is contrary to all just laws, human and divine, which tend to ameliorate the condition of man, and show the beneficence that all Legislatures should show to their people."

Again, Mr. Charlton, for whose views on this question we have quite an interest, said:

"To sum up with regard to this remarkable National Policy, let me present, Mr. Speaker, briefly a few of the salient points in regard to it. In the first place it will rob the farmer, in the second place it will rob the lumberman, in the third place it will rob the fisherman, in the fourth place it will rob the laborer, in the fifth place it will rob the shipowners, in the sixth place it will rob every man who receives a salary, in the seventh place it will enable the manufacturers to rob all classes, and for diversion to prey upon each other. These, sir, are the features of this celebrated policy."

Again, Sir Richard Cartwright, in his speech in 1879, said:

"And, under all these circumstances, knowing full well that our political position at the present moment is of a precarious character, you are entering on a policy which seems purposely contrived to exacerbate all these difficulties and to split our new Confederation into a thousand pieces."

Yet it is patent to all that prices have not on the whole, materially advanced, and even Mr. Blake is constrained to admit that there "has been a great improvement in the business and trade of the country!" We are not at present concerned with the argument that this prosperity is due to causes other than the National Policy. We admit that since Sir John McDonald and his friends returned to power, the country has been abundantly blessed by Providence. The remarkable fact remains that co-existent with the National Policy, the country is not going to ruin; that our new Confederation is not being "split into a thousand pieces;" that if our people are being robbed on all sides, they are quite unconscious of it; that trade and business has revived, and that Mr. Blake admits it!

Asylum Management.

We learn that the Government have appointed a Commission, under "The Public Enquiries Act, 1879," to investigate all matters relating to the management of the Hospital for the Insane. The Commission consists of Hon. A. A. Macdonald, Rev. Geo. W. Hodgson, and Charles C. Gardner, Esq. The action of the Government in this respect is commendable, and we think a better Commission for the purpose than the above could not be appointed.

Exports.

Mr. E. L. LYDIARD furnishes us with the following statement of exports from Queen's and King's Counties for the month of July:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Value. Includes Potatoes, Oats, Lobsters, Eggs, and Miscellaneous.

Messrs. Blake, Anglin and Huntington at Georgetown.

Messrs. Blake, Anglin and Huntington have come and gone without exciting that great enthusiasm or receiving anything like the reception we were led to expect. About forty persons, many of whom were Conservatives, were at the station to receive them. No excitement, no enthusiasm, not even a passing word of admiration could be heard.

The meeting, which was called for 2 o'clock, was a decided failure. Not more than 130 persons were present, and at least one fourth of these were Conservatives who attended to hear the addresses of the "Great Liberal Statesmen of the day."

Roderick Munroe presided, and in his own inimitable style, opened the meeting. Doctor Robertson, of Montague, then in a very shakey manner, read an address of welcome, the purport of which, notwithstanding the very small audience, could not be heard. Mr. Blake rose to reply to the address, and after a few general remarks settled down to the hard task he has taken upon himself to accomplish. His speech was a rehash of that delivered in the Rink, in Charlottetown, on Monday night, as was also that of Mr. Anglin. Mr. Huntington said a few words at the conclusion of Mr. Anglin's speech, exhorting his hearers to be true to Canada and Canada's interests no matter who held the reins of Government, and on retiring was cheered to the echo. The applause throughout was feeble, and always started by L. B. Davies, who appeared to be ever ready to applaud the most clumsy joke or extravagant falsehood. When Mr. Huntington resumed his seat Dr. McIntyre came to the front to move a vote of thanks, but was so overcome by reflections on his certain defeat in '83, that he was compelled to retire not with informing the people, however, that the cause of the Grit defeat of '78 was the want of votes. During the exhibition Dr. McIntyre made of himself, both friends and opponents hung their heads to mourn the fact that we had a man in this country with so much presumption and little brains. After Dr. McIntyre's ignominious failure, the Chairman (who up to this time sat with his back to the audience) conveyed the vote of thanks to our "distinguished visitors" to which Mr. Blake replied, proposing three cheers for the Queen, which were heartily given. Three feeble cheers for the three Reformers followed, and the meeting was brought to a close.

Every one, Grit and Tory, is disappointed. Sir Leonard Tilley and his friends will have no difficulty in exposing those would-be reformers on their arrival, and showing to the public that they, and not the Grits, have the best interests of "this Canada of ours" at heart.

Weather Bulletin.

Probabilities for the next 24 hours for the Maritime Provinces.

TORONTO, August 5-10 a. m.

Moderate winds and fair warm weather.

From the "Romance of the Beautiful."

'Tis passing sweet to sail down pleasure's stream; While fancy revels in a gorgeous dream; For naught to care, to long for, or to dread, In this green world of Beauty round us spread.

To lose the snowy canvas to the breeze, And sweep triumphant o'er the summer seas, In sweet, mesmeric trance of soft repose, While all blooms sweet and bright Couleur de Rose.

The World may jeer, and green-eyed envy quail, But who care care, while pleasure fills the sail.

Oh! happy he, a state yet prized by few, Whose kingdom is the winds and waters blue.

Who, independent of a scheming dark, Moors the high monarch of his bounding bark.

Through foreign climes he moves, on Pleasure's wing, And leads the world, as if its legal King!

Through Courts and Capitols he moves at will, Where monarchs frown, and sly courtiers smile.

His foamy prow now glides at his command, Where Hercules' high stoned pillars stand, And plows the dashing surge of that fair sea, That laves the shores of Greece and Italy.

But now becalmed, neath evening's golden ray, He anchor drops in Naples' beauteous Bay!

Mirage of beauty!—mirror-like it lies, Reflecting Heaven's bright radiance to the skies.

With towers begirt,—Palace and Village bright, A picture framed to fancy's pure delight!

There sweeps the painted skiff on Zephyr's wing, And from each Gondola, sweet carols ring.

A living Panorama, bright and fair, Nor scene on earth, with this may once compare.

Fair Queen of Cities!—on thy summit crowned, Stands grey St. Elmo, guardian Fort renowned.

Around whose base, fair Palaces are ranged, Gay princely Homes, with Villas interchanged.

There wreath and Beauty promenade the while, Bedecked in fashion's guise, and Pleasure's smile.

While high upon the right, that mighty cone, Vesuvius lofty summit looms alone, Discharging sulphurous smoke, and mirky shrouds.

Portending havoc from his thunder clouds; Yet all around is clothed in summer's bloom, Forgetful of Pompeii's fearful doom!

Luxurious country, decked in Beauty rare, Would that thy Race with Nature could compare.

The lingering eye, still courts the splendid view, And still the Bay reflects celestial blue!

Who has not heard of that disastrous doom, O'erwhelmed Pompeii in a living tomb!

The unconscious Citizens at close of day, Assembled, glad, en masse, to see the play.

A murky cloud, of dark Egyptian gloom, Obscured the night, with sulphurous perfume.

A deadly shower of ashes, poured around, The breath invaded, with a stench profound, Then came a sound, like thundering cannons' rush,

Convulsed the Earth,—and shook the trembling World, Then from Vesuvius burst the torrent dire,— A deluge vast,—a hissing flood of fire,

Adown the mountains side, it swept the shore, And fair Pompeii's lamps were seen no more!

Till seventeen hundred years had shone and fled, She was discovered in her lava bed, Bedecked with all the implements of life, Of busy Housewifery, that endless strife,

With busts, and statues, idols, jewels, gold, And elegancies nameless,—wealth untold, An antiquarian feast,—to proual and pay, A fit museum for the curious eye!

The Fishery Award.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—How is it that there was not one word said in the addresses presented to Mr. Blake about our share of the Fishery Award. Surely the subject was of sufficient importance to have been brought to his notice if he is to be our future Premier.

His opinions on questions of trade may be, and probably are, worth little. But on a legal and constitutional question, such as the Fishery Award, they would, at least, have weight. It is certainly singular that a question involving a million and a quarter dollars should get the go-by while hours were spent in showing that we were ruined because we pay a cent a pound more than we used to on cotton warp.

Did Mr. Blake feel a delicacy in alluding to the subject while the guest of Mr. Davies. If not, why the silence. Was the question forgotten, or was mum the word.

Yours, PISCATOR.

THE PETERS COMBINATION LOCK COMPANY.—Another evidence of the value of the N. P. is to be found in the condition of the brass manufacturing industry in Moncton, as shown by the announcement of a 5 per cent dividend for the first half year.

The making of brass goods is almost an entirely new industry in Canada, and the success which has attended the moderate effort put forth proves conclusively that it is an industry for which Canada has the best facilities and one which only needed the fair play which the N. P. gives in order to obtain a foothold. The promoters of the Moncton Brass Works who have gone along very quietly and have encountered some difficulty, are to be congratulated on the fact that their business has now passed the stage of experiment and reached an assured basis.
