1953 Farm Production

Continued from page 9. Eggs are under the same support as in 1953. The laying flocks, however, are larger in 1954. It is anticipated that prices may be lower in the first six months of 1954, and the later prices will depend a great deal upon the Spring hatch of chickens. Poultry prices should not be substantially different. The expansion in the broiler trade has had a tremendous development with almost 26 million pounds of broilers slaughtered last year, or about half of the total chicks killed in inspected plants. There will undoubtedly be an increased demand for broilers in 1954. Other prices will be determined to some extent by United States and Canadian demand. That is, on fowl, heavy chicken and turkeys. In seeds the tendency is toward substantially lower prices in 1954, particularly on clovers, alfalfa, timothy, and many other grasses. The whole general picture would point to firm prices that may be slightly lower than in 1953, but in the main not differing substantially from last year's levels. As already indicated, strict attention to business principles in our processes of production, and avoidance of non-constructive production and marketing plans, should bring to our farm producers reasonably satisfactory returns during the next season.

Mr. Simba Guards Queen's Silver

LONDON, (Reuters) — Nobody dared touch Queen Elizabeth's precious tableware Thursday — Mr. Simba saw to that. The powerful bull mastiff, hired for the occasion, rode beside the royal treasures as they were transported in five truck trips to a London museum for their first public exhibition. It was a big day for Mr. Simba and he all but smiled for photographers clustering around the truck. Two years ago, the mastiff was placed in a home for stray dogs and condemned to death. A firm which specializes in shipping valuables decided his talents for biting humans and cuffing with his massive paws should not be wasted. They gave him a job guarding gold bars and other treasures moved to and from banks.
