The bidding:

2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠

Opening lead — nine of diamonds.

It was the eve of Christmas, 1931. The twelfth session of the Lenz-Culbertson match saw the Culbertsons assume a commanding lead of 14,525 points. The first half of the 150-rubber match was completed.

Tensions had noticably diminished as the Culbertsons steadily increased their lead, and the result became a foregone conclusion.

Early in the evening, some comedy relief was furnished by an extraordinary occurrence. Jacoby had won the cut for deal on the first hand of the session and had made a part score of 60.

Culbertson should have dealt the next hand, but somehow Lenz got the cards and dealt. He passed and Lightner opened with a no-trump which Jacoby doubled. At this point, Lenz asked for a review of the bidding, whereupon Culbertson said "I passed, you passed, Lightner bid a . . ."

"But you didn't deal," exclaimed Lenz—and the referee, Lieutenant (now General) Alfred M. Gruenther, took over.

The ruling was clear. The deal, though out of turn, having been accepted, was official. Culbertson had clearly indicated his hand was too weak for an opening bid. Since Lightner had improperly received information about Culbertson's hand, Lightner was barred from further participation in the bidding.

Lightner was thus placed in the position where, having opened with a weak hand (in line with his theory of opening weak no-trump bids), he was prohibited from rescuing himself if he got doubled.

If Lenz had passed Jacoby's double, the result would have been a minor disaster. With Lightner barred from bidding, and the normal spade lead from Jacoby, Lightner would have wound up with just two tricks, losing four spades, four diamonds, two clubs and a heart. Down five in those days was 1,000 points.

But Lenz bid two clubs and Lightner was out of the trap. Jacoby went to two spades and made five.

Lenz and Jacoby made a game, counting their part score, but lost a golden opportunity to extract a heavy penalty.

Scottish Court Blocks Romance

EDINBURGH (AP)—A Scottish court Wednesday refused to permit the marriage of 26-year-old Dominic Elwes and 19- year -old Tessa Kennedy, heiress to a shipping fortune.

Four judges of the court of sessions rejected the runaway lovers' appeal against a temporary injunction, obtained by Tessa's father, barring their marriage.

The couple fled to Scotland last week to escape an English law forbidding marriage by anyone under 21 without parental consent. The age in Scotland is 16.

They skipped out in defiance of a London court order banning their marriage which was obtained by Tessa's father, Geoffrey Kennedy. The father then obtained a temporary injunction here.

After they arrived in Scotland, an English judge ordered Dominic to bring Tessa home and break off the romance. Because Dominic ignored this, the judge ordered him jailed. But so long as he remains in Scotland he cannot be arrested, the British Lord Chancellor's Office ruled.

In rejecting the lovers' appeal, Scottish Judge Lord Clyde declared that a lifting of the court order would open the door to their marriage but at the same time would allow the couple to take the law into their own hands. He ruled they must settle their battle with the English courts first.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR
is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints Each day the code letters are different.
