THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 25, 1896.

THEN AND NOW

The Hon. Mr. Laurier, acting along the lines of a statement made by him some time ago to the effect that "nothing was too good for Mr. Tarte," has made that gentleman Minister of Public Works in the new cabinet. This is a most important department, controlling as it does the expenditure of large amounts of money, and its administration should be in the hands of a man who is above suspicion. But Mr. Laurier has said that "nothing is too good for Mr. Tarte," and so he places that gentleman at the head of the Public Works Department, resurrecting him from the political dead in order to do so. It may be interesting to point out just here that the brotherly love which now prevails between these two eminent Liberals did not always exist, and it may also be said that Mr. J. Israel Tarte has not always been a Liberal. Mr. Tarte was at one time a strong Conservative, and he is on record as having on more than one occasion given free rein to his feelings with regard to Mr. Laurier. Some of these utterances are now being reproduced by the Upper Province papers and it may not be out of place to transfer a few extracts to our columns. Mr. Tarte, on one occasion, is reported to have spoken as follows :—

"Mr. Laurier is by no means a mere nobody. Still is he such a man as we agree to call a man of talent? He is a varnished individual. Scratch him a little, and you will find the mediocrity underneath.

"He poses, and will pose more when he roosts on the treasury benches. This, however, cannot supply the place of what he does not possess—principles, sound convictions and patriotism. He would love his country if it were infidel. " He will never forget to draw his salary.

"He is without frankness. To procure an election in his county he becomes a Conservative and repudiates his past, to which however, he returns when circumstances permit. In Catholic parishes he proclaims himself the devoted son of the church. Before Protestants he poses as a victim of the clergy because he defends their rights which the priests would take away."

This is a rather slashing criticism of the man with whom Mr. Tarte is now associated in the government of the country. But it is not all that Mr. Tarte has had to say regarding Mr. Laurier. He is also on record as follows :—

"Mr. Laurier is a man who is not wanting in varnish. He speaks well—that is to say, has an easy elocution and a phrase passably correct when he has had an opportunity to study it by heart eight days beforehand. He has no large ideas. His information in politics and his notions of history are very limited. The fact is that he has not pronounced one discourse of a nature to reveal in him a man of serious worth. His polished manners, his astuteness, a certain ability in concealing his principles not far removed from hyp crisy have given him the popularity that he enjoys in his own country."

Again Mr. Tarte is reported to have said :

"We burn to see him installed in a minister's chair. . . . The varnish scratched, nothing remains but half rotten wood."

How lovingly Mr. Tarte regarded Mr. Laurier in "the good old days." But now things have changed. Mr. Tarte is no longer a Conservative, and Mr. Laurier is installed in the first minister's chair. Mr. Laurier is now a great man, but greater is Mr. Tarte.

WHAT MR. DAVIES MEANT.

The Guardian is authority for the statement that Mr. Davies, at the New London picnic yesterday, said that "now we can hardly find a Tory with a fine tooth comb." What Mr. Davies probably intended to tell his hearers was that judging by the number of office seekers with which he is daily and hourly tormented he thought that everyone left here must have turned Grit, and that those who had not must have gone over to New Brunswick, where it was impossible, owing to the large number of Tories, to obtain a constituency for Minister of Railways Blair, and although he was then engaged trying to induce Mr. King to retire for him he had so far been unsuccessful; that there had sprung up in Saskatchewan an unexpected number of Tories and independent Liberals who had refused to accept the Hon. Mr. Patterson as a candidate although he had been pitchforked upon them by Mr. Laurier, and that now, owing to Tory obstinacy, there were on hand what never was heard of before, viz , two cabinet ministers without constituencies. This is doubtless what Mr. Davies meant at New London yesterday, although he did not say so.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

—It is darkly hinted that when Mr. Martin asked for the portfolio of the Interior, Mr. Laurier winked the other eye and remarked, "Not for Joseph."

—The Mail and Empire thinks it is high time for Mr. Laurier to appoint a commission to decide who shall be Minister of the Interior.

—A Winnipeg despatch says: The politicians here seem to think that when Joseph Martin returns home from Ottawa he will announce himself out of politics. They regard it as certain that Attorney-General Sifton is Mr. Laurier's choice for the vacant portfolio.

—St. John Telegraph : It is sad to learn, on the authority of the Charlottetown Guardian, that "there is also a growing doubt as to the elder Dickens' permanent place among the great names of English literature." Thus, after half a century, is there a vindication of the good judgment of an old time St John editor who began to publish "Dombey & Son" as a serial, but discontinued it because he considered the novel a failure.

THE IMPENDING EUROPEAN CRISIS.

Where Prince Bismarck Thinks the Conflict Will Be Decided.

London, July 22.—A despatch from Hamburg says the following is an authorized expression of Prince Bismarck's view on the pending European crisis. English policy is governed by anxiety about the conflict which England must fight out with Russia and France. France is striving for the Soudan and Russia for India, and as England is their common antagonist in these aspirations, they are naturally allies even without a treaty. Egypt is of great strategic importance to England's position in the Soudan and India, and is, therefore, a pivot of British policy, the anxieties of which have been a little enhanced by Russia's recent attitude toward the Egyptian question. England will not give up Egypt, but does not feel herself a match for Russia and France, and is therefore casting about for help, hitherto, and let us hope in future, in vain so far as Germany and Austra-Hungary are concerned. But the British are tormented by another anxiety. They no longer believe in the stability of their European empire, for, whereas many things have been changed elsewhere in the last decade, England's system of defence is still the same as in Wellington's time. It suffices for her non-European countries. In view of the world-wide extent of her interests, she should have more ships on foreign coasts than Russia and France. But the power or powers which predominate where the conflict must be decided, that is in the English Channel and the North Sea, will be victorious. The French channel fleet alone is already a match for the English, and its junction with the Russian Baltic fleet would put an end to England's superiority in waters in which the conflict must be decided. Add to this that her insulated position involves the danger of England being starved by an enemy so that she must unconditionally surrender if a victorious hostile fleet should succeed in cutting off her supplies. England has not ignored this danger and. therefore, is working diligently at the task of increasing her navy to such an extent that it will be superior under all circumstances. If she maintains her superiority at sea, her antagonists must try to convert the sea war as quickly as possible into a land war, and to seek a decision where all the navies of the world wide meet, that is in London.

STRIKES IN RUSSIA.

Seditious Pamphlets and Appeals Extensively Circulated.

During the last two weeks some 10,000 Russian workmen have been out on strike here. They demand a reduction of the hours of labor and refuse to return to work unless this is granted. Most of them belong to cotton spinning and weaving mills. One establishment has had to suspend operations altogether, and others have been using only part of their machinery. There has been no public disturbance, the men remaining very quiet and orderly. The police are rathere puzzled at the evident organization of the movement, and have, apparently, not yet gone beyond threats of sending the strikers to their native villages. The heads of the police have also been very reluctant to adopt the measures of force hitherto usual in such cases in the absence of nearly all the Ministers at Moscow and Nizhni-Novgorod. It has generally been the custom to send a troop of Cossacks and take summary measures against recalcitrant workmen in this country, but it would appear that the authorities are gradually awaking to the fact that a very serious question of a novel character for Russia lies before them in the near future.

Russians have continued to pride themselves on the absence of any labor question in their country, which they maintain differentiates it so much from other European states where the struggle between labor and capital occupies so much attention. This may have been the case twenty years ago, but there never was a greater fallacy than such a statement at the present day. The Government has for years been forcing the development of manufactures and industries, with the natural result that there are now hundreds of thousands of comparitively intelligent and discipline workmen who are rapidly acquiring ideas of the rights of labor as taught abroad, and who are infinitely more difficult to deal with than the agricultural moujik. For several years past strikes and disturbances have been on the increase in all manufacturing districts, but they have generally been kept as secret as possible. Socialistic and seditious pamplets and appeals are circulated among mill hands in great numbers. Only about six weeks ago, a few days before the Czar attended the launch of the new cruiser, the "Russia," on the Neva, a number of Socialistic handbills containing remarks against the rich ones of the earth who live in palaces, were found distributed over one of the new ironclads which was being finished alongside the Admiralty dockyard.—St. Petersburg Correspondence London Times.

ANOTHER BRITISH VICTORY.

Matabeles Driven Back—The Enemy Lose Eighty Killed.

Cape Town, July 21.—A despatch received from Buluwayo to-day states that Sir Frederick Carrington, who left Buluwayo on Friday, hoping to be able to strike a decisive blow against the Matebeles, came up with the hostiles in the Matoppo hills on Monday. He engaged at once, and severe fighting continued until nightfall. Firing had been resumed when the despatch was sent this morning.

London, July 21.—General Sir Frederick Carrington, commander of the forces operating against the rebellious Matabeles in Rhodesio, telegraphs that he this morning attacked the Matabeles stronghold in the Matoppo Hills, south of Buluwayo. The fighting continued until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the position of the natives was carried, and the kraals occupied by them were burned. Eighty of the Matabeles were killed. The British lost three killed and eleven wounded.

THE HERBERT FULLER TRAGEDY.

Direct Testimony Against the First Mate —Mr. Monk's Story.

Halifax, N. S., July 23.—The inquiry held at the instigation of Consul General Ingraham into the Herbert Fuller tragedy was concluded this evening. The "star chamber" proceedings adopted from the beginning were persisted in to the end. The evidence, however, it may be stated, developed nothing particularly new in addition to what has already been sent. The testimony of Seaman Thomas Brown was the most important, for he swore positively that he saw Mate Bram kill Captain Nash with an axe, and he afterwards heard cries and groans, from the captain's wife. Brown also gives a fairly reasonable excuse for not making it known at the time. He was afraid the mate would kill him if he disclosed this, but he communicated it to one of the crew, and said as soon as he reached port he would tell it all. It was through this man's imparting the information to Spencer, who told Monk, that led to the mate being placed in irons. The more the matter is investigated the clearer it becomes that Mate Bram alone did the killing.

Mate Bram does not seem able to reconcile some of his statements, but persists in his assertion that he is innocent of the crime. He saw no one do the killing but thinks it was Brown. He bases this opinion on the ground that nobody else but Brown could have done so. Many people think Bram committed the awful act solely for the prospect of financial gain, and this for the time being had actually crazed the man. On the recommendation of the medical examiner, the city stipendiary begins an investigation to-morrow at noon. It is expected this will not have proceeded far before it is discovered that the magistrate has no jurisdiction, and then the matter will be dropped and all concerned conveyed to Boston. All have expressed a willingness to go, including Bram, who sensibly says that he is in the hands of the law and objection would only mean delay. It is likely a warrant will be sworn out by the United States consul or some one acting for him, and this will be the authority on which the men will be taken.

Young Monk was released to-night on the recognizance of his father, Frank H. Monk, who has given a pledge to produce his son in court to-morrow. Steward Spencer, who is entitled to as much credit as young Monk, thinks it hard, and with apparent good reason, that Monk should be free while he is kept in a cell.

Monks in his statement to-day, said that shortly after he heard the noise in the room in which the captain was, he heard the captain's wife cry, "Oh! Oh!" He heard no noise from the second mate's room and it is, therefore, certain that Brandberg was the first victim.

Lester Monk, the Harvard student who took charge of the vessel after the tragedy and sailed her to Halifax, in an interview published in the Halifax Herald, says :—

"I was not one whit relieved, I can assure you, when the full conviction that Bram was probably the author of the diabolical butchery dawned upon us later, followed by the discovery that he was playing fast and loose with us in sailing the vessel.

"I do not pretend to know a great deal about navigation, but it did not take me long to discover what he was after, and with that knowledge came the determination to take things fully into my own hands and head the barque for the nearest port.

"I was for a time in doubt as to this, but finally decided that St. John, N. B , would probably be the best port for us to run to. The first mate had suggested that we should try to make the Bermudas, but this was a foolish proposition as the prevailing wind at the time was dead against that course.

"I knew enough about navigation to be able to approximately determine our position and course, and the sequel proved that I came pretty near it, only that I had pointed the ship a little too high north to make St. John.

"At one time, when I felt sure that we were at least 100 miles from shore, one of the seamen declared that he could sight land ahead, but I gave little attention to this and kept on my course.

"I am afraid that just about that time my long loss of sleep and rest, and the mental burden that lay so heavily upon me made me just a bit reckless, and I was almost ready to run the risk of letting the vessel go ashore, so eager was I to end the awful agony and once more place my feet on dry land."

A BRYAN VICTORY.

The Democratic Candidate Has a Majority in the Populist Convention.

St. Louis, Mo., July 23.—The Bryan supporters are jubilant to-night. They demonstrated after a stormy day in the populist convention that they had a majority of 104. They perfected their permanent organization, installed their candidate, Senator Allen of Nebraska, as permanent chairman, took charge of the machinery of the convention and the committee.

The silver convention at Music hall simply dwadled along, listening to the speeches and transacting trivial business, in pursuance of their prearranged programme, remaining in session in the hope of influencing the action of the other convention in the direction of endorsing silver and the Chicago ticket.

There were two sessions of the populist convention, a morning session of two hours and an afternoon session of six hours. The latter carried the convention into the night. Both were turbulent and noisy, but the tumult was confined to the delegates on the floor, the galleries, as on yesterday, being practically empty. A bitter feeling manifested itself among the "middle of the road" faction, which found vent in several wild demonstrations.

The morning session was a virtual blank so far as business was concerned. The report of the committee on credentials was not ready, and the convention listened to a baritone from Oklahoma and a sweet singer from Arkansas render some campaign parodies on popular ballads. There was also a dramatically arranged "middle of the road" demonstration which failed to arouse much enthusiasm despite its theatrical accessories.

The convention was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Boston, July 23.—The following telegram was sent to the comptroller of the currency, Eckels, this afternoon by the Young Men's Democratic Club :

Boston, July 23.

Hon. James H. Eckles, Hon. Benjiman Cable, Chicago, Ills.

The executive committee of the Young Men's Democratic club of Massachusetts pledge their hearty support of any action of the Chicago conference in behalf of true democracy and sound money.

(Signed) Sigourney Butler, President.

Wm. T. Jenney, Chairman Executive Committee.

Lincoln, Neb., July 23.—In going over hundreds of telegrams received since his nomination, Mr. Bryan was to-day gratified to find one from Asheville, N. C., that had not been before brought to his attention. It was from Speaker Chas. F. Crisp, saying : "Accept my hearty congratulations on your nomination."

Chicago, July 23.—The gold standard conference has decided that a call for a convention must be issued.

ON SOUTHERN SOIL.

The picturesque locality of the South has been drawn upon at various times in plays, but in all of them has been introduced some touch of the late difficulty of "darkey" life. To connect a story, the locale of which is centered in this portion of the country, and yet keep away from these common points, has been a difficult one, yet it has been accomplished. "On Southern Soil" is a play dealing with life in the neighborhood of Norfolk, Va., yet it is devoid of any material that borders on the time-worn incidents so commonly used by play writers as a backbone for their piece. Strong in incident, powerful in startling situations, mighty in the climaxes of its different acts, this play tells a story so full of hearty interest, so complete in its blending of villainy and triumph, so enriched with genuine comedy, and containing such well drawn characters and developing such unlooked for incidents, that its phenomenal success is nothing remarkable. An environment of scenic splendor adds considerable to the excellence of the production, while a cast of more than ordinarily competent artists delineate the various types put into their hands for presentation. Such a production will be given by Marsh & Farrington's company, which will appear here in the Opera House on Thursday, August 13th. They come direct from New York to Halifax, and will spend two weeks in the provinces. Mr. A. W. Cross is the advance agent, and is in town to-day making arrangements.
