According to one of our exchanges Salem, Mass., claims the original "shirt waist man." He is John Coll MacDonald, a native of Prince Edward Island, and is known as the best dressed man in Salem. The shirt waist attracted attention when he donned it for the first time. The material was gingham of the Forty second tartan style, combined blue, green and red Scotch plaid, in which the green predominated. This was the tartan plaid in which the Macdonalds of Scotland, his ancestors, arrayed themselves.
