ELLEN'S DIARY

Hear The Frogs Sing

Now, new and fresh and beautiful June comes into her reign. We marvel once more over the June-loveliness spread along the length and breadth of the farmlands: the miracle of the faultless lace being woven on the branches of the trees, wonder of cowslipped stream and dandelion pasture; enchantment of rippling brook, of warm light winds, of serene skies and a winding road leading off around some bend of way or up and over a hilltop.

We enjoy much the busy-busyness of the season: farmers intent on the duties of the seedtime, tractors in the fields at "second plowing" it may be, or at the harrowing, at the cropping so familiar to us in its every phase, its every twist and turn. I read page but everlastingly new as it comes.

The haste of the choring now to be off in good time to the land; the white line being laid on the fertilizers; water-jars being filled against thirsty rounds, lunches carried to stay the workers through long afternoons in distant fields, when they remain there until dusk spreading its dewy shadows brings them home to the chores.

And then? Rest for "the weary"? It may be that if skies are favorable and the circumstance of the cropping allows, nay, begs for it, the tractor is refueled. A warmer jacket donned, then the younger farmer goes back to pick up the briefly rested threads of his work in the field continuing it beneath the starlight, his lights hailing those of Rob's tractor beyond this or that hedgerow, where Jamie's stint on it ended and Rob's choring-into over, he comes to his spell of over-time there.

Yet in the prevailing busyness we pick up many a scrap of enchantment to treasure. The younger farmer could point out to us a new discovery—the one "wild" oak tree in the woodlands of this farm and tell of engaging scenes he overheard and from eminences of far fields. We catch Jamie looking out on the June-spell, eyes loving the fresh-clad and patterning farmlands, the unfolding leaf. Did growth come as suddenly as this last year? he wonders.

Book we forget the details. It is as well. This is the best of all Junes. Goldfinches laid the foundation "well and truly" for their little castle in a caragana bush today. Granddaughter saw them. And we too presently must come to view it, inveigled thither by an excited "You don't know what we saw—you'd never guess."

And so we go to see nests, and count tulips, and watch the little black cat and his mother on pasture, and visit the kittens in a stable. And at the edge of night this evening when partings were made which was to take them home to their rest, two faces returned to press against the screen-door, with wrapt expression.

"You'll have to come and hear the frogs sing. There must be a hundred tonight. They're just bustin' out their throats."

"Yes, it's coming in here."

"But you can't really hear it there. You must come out—it's only a step." And we rest our doings and come out to every charm of a June-night to stars and music and a pair picking up nice young memories now to keep them in later years "Wherever they wander, wherever they roam."

Go now to the June day. We count it away grudgingly. They ar, after all—these rare days of June too few at the most.

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

MUTCH - FOSTER

Baskets of White Snapdragon formed the setting in Trinity United Church on the morning of May 21st, at 10.00 am. for the marriage of Miss Eva Elaine Mutch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wellington Mutch, Charlottetown, to Mr. Gerald Raymond Foster, Barrister, son of Mr. C. Harry Foster and the late Mr. Foster, Charlottetown.

The marriage was solemnized by Rev. A. Frank MacLean, B.A., in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The wedding music was played by Mr. Royston F. Mugford, A.R.C.O., Organist of Trinity United Church.

The ceremony was held in the church organist, Mr. Alfred Robinson, accompanied by Mr. Lloyd Mason who sang the Wedding Prayer. The choir sang "O Perfect Love" and Monson Tabors sang "Because" during the signing of the register.

The church was decorated with vases and baskets of variegated mums while the guest seats were marked with large white bows.

The radiant young bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, by whom she was given a gown of white Chantilly lace over satin, the princess bodice hav-

MARY HAWORTH

Needs Help But Doesn't Know Where To Turn

Dear Mary Haworth Your advice to others has made me realize how much I need help. But I don't know where to turn because I am shy and afraid to tell anyone how miserable I am.

I am in my early 50s, unmarried and pretty much alone. It's not too bad being alone if you can stand it. But I can never relax and stay home for an evening, because as night falls the darkness and stillness of the house upset me, and I have to run to friends' homes for company.

I am always running somewhere and as all my friends are married, I know that I am in their way. I hate them all; they have everything and I don't even have peace of mind. I hate everyone; I think they are all out to deceive me.

I can't sleep nights, and get in such a state that I fear I may do something desperate eventually. I have always been afraid of death; but I have reached a point where I can understand why people commit suicide.

YEN FOR LOVE

My parents are dead and I've never been close to my brothers and sisters, and wouldn't turn to them. I want so desperately to be helped, but haven't much to spend for treatment. I've always had to carry the whole family on my shoulders; all my earnings went to them; and now I love from week to week.

I long to meet a really nice man. If only someone would give me a chance, I would show them I'm not so bad. And if someone would be sincere and like me, I don't say love, I don't think anyone would ever love me; it would be wonderful.

I am so confused even while writing you. I feel the darkness closing in; I must get out of here. Ever since I can remember, and still today, my mind is very confused about sex. Thank you very much for any guidance you can give me. E.B.

SEEK OUR HELP

Dear E.B.: You write from a great city where there is no shortage of professional help for emotionally disturbed persons. You have a choice of several resources—such as mental hygiene clinics, family service agencies, and pastoral or church counselling on a psychiatric basis—all available to needy persons of little income.

Your immediate need is to establish a confidential discursive relationship with a trained counsellor, who is sympathetically familiar with the pattern of your distress. This is the first long step towards peace of mind.

It may relieve you to know that your problem isn't unique. You aren't alone in it. It is a fairly commonplace affliction in present day society. And, as you intuitively recognize, it is caused by being emotionally isolated from people. Such isolation is unnatural; it is "against nature."

JOIN GROUP ACTIVITIES

The essential and durable remedy is to join in a common cause with other people; to discover opportunities for being a faithful participant in group activities, where you are valued or useful as "one of us." You need to share habitually in the "we"-feeling about life.

As a lead in this direction, I suggest you write to the United Prayer Tower, 1571 Grand Avenue, St. Paul 5, Minnesota, and ask to be supplied with its monthly publication: The Manual of Prayer. Here is a non-profit, non-denominational Christian enterprise, founded in 1945, to promote widespread spiritual interchange, for the good of all.

Through it, many erstwhile lonely persons on this continent have found the creative answer to their needs of cordial inclusion in constructive human fellowship. M.H. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

MORNING SMILE

"What has become of Yonson?" "He went to America, and has made a name for himself there."

"How?" "He calls himself Johnson now!"

LET'S EAT

Foibles Of Dieters

The Chef and I were having Sunday brunch at my daughter's home in Westport, Conn.

"Your daughter, Madame Ruth Castelli," remarked the Chef, "makes the finest blueberry muffins I ever tasted. They are sweet enough, but not too sweet for a bread and the blueberries do not sink to the bottom."

"Did she use one of your recipes by any chance?"

"No, she worked this out herself with frozen blueberries. She gave me her recipe."

Frozen Blueberry Muffins Cream together 1/2 c. sugar and 1-3 c. shortening. Beat 1 egg and blend in.

Sift together 2 c. enriched flour 3/4 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. cinnamon and 3 tsp. baking powder. Fold into the first mixture alternately with 1 c. milk. Mix well, but do not beat.

Stir 1/2 c. sifted confectioner's sugar into 1 c. not-thawed frozen blueberries. Fold into the batter. Spoon into oiled muffin pans, half filling them.

Bake at 375 degrees F., allowing 35 min. for large muffins, 25 min. for minis.

This entire brunch menu is delicious and prepared very quickly," continued the Chef. "There is good taste here and excellent training."

ELEANOR ROSS

Decorating A Bedroom

Color and charm for a bedroom can be purchased by the yard or together with co-ordinated separates. One of the nicest lifts for spring is a new decorating scheme for the bedroom.

If you enjoy florals, there are fabrics strewn with rosebuds or violets. And if your looking for a really new and fresh motif, you'll find tulips blooming on some of the prettiest fabrics.

PRINTED CHINTZ

There's printed chintz and striped chintz to blend. In this pattern, you can have readymade curtains, draperies and bedspreads or you can make your own. The tulip-printed dimity is an excellent choice for curtains.

Naturally, these fabrics are designed to wash and wear for many a season. Put them into the washing machine and keep them as lovely as fresh as tulips should look.

EMBROIDERED BEDSPREADS

Dacron bedspreads, plus a skirt for the dressing table, all prettily embroidered, look so delicate, frothy, and yet are so practical. They go in and out of the suds like a hankie and dry in record time. Also, they need little, if any, ironing.

One in particular comes in white with pink embroidery or the reverse. The top of the spread is covered with dainty butterfly embroidery; the skirt is full and embroidered at the hem.

Another new notion we liked consisted of a corduroy coverlet with rounded corners draped gracefully over a provincial printed chintz dust ruffle.

KEEP IN TRIM

Frozen Blueberries Make Fine Muffins

By Ida Jean Kaln

Baffled by feminine logic, a man points out the inconsistencies of lady dieters. "In a cafeteria line-up, overweight ladies carefully choose a low calorie green salad or a fruit salad—but then with complete abandon, add dressing lavishly. Invariably, they pass up the main course and take on the tray a few crackers or some thin melba toast."

"They add cream to the coffee—and then daintily drop in a sweetening tablet with an air of great satisfaction. After they've eaten the salad and munched the crackers, they look wistful and then go happily back to pick out a rich dessert."

The gentleman is right about this being the wrong way to diet. And since he has reduced 20 pounds by concentrating on the main course and skipping the trimmings, he knows what he's talking about.

Granted, it's not always easy to diet in a cafeteria. Perhaps you know how it is. You pick up a tray and stand in line. What meets your hungry eye? Desserts—juicy cherry tarts, banana cream pie, wedges of cake, thickly frosted— all completely over-shadowing the lower calorie jello and fruits.

Then come the heaped-up plates of cold cuts and scoops of potato salad, richly mixed with mayonnaise. This is followed by the small salads—the now look meager in comparison.
