Home, School Impact On Children Stressed

Home and school should make its impact felt in the interests of its children, so that they will grow up in a society without fear for their survival, said Dr. K.A. Parker in addressing the Notre Dame Home and School Association.

Dr. Parker commended the leadership contribution to the community given by Notre Dame Home and School, and emphasized the value of co-operative effort of the local, provincial and national groups.

Though Home and School has a number of achievements to its credit, he said, there are many other fields it can reach, for the common bond that unites its members is the welfare of children.

With the threat of nuclear warfare cast aside, countries such as Canada could give leadership in helping countries less fortunate, educating their youth and sharing our experiences with them.

So that these things might be achieved, the government must be made to see that the threat from annihilation must be removed, that nations behind and in front of the Iron Curtain realize the utter nonsense of world destruction. In the present state of circumstances, there could be no better achievement achieved by Home and School, he said.

NEEDS OF CHILDREN

The latter part of the address dealt with the needs of children. Children have needs, he said, that adults tend to overlook in the routine of the day. They need a sense of belonging, to feel they are wanted, they need the love and affection so often denied them. Statistics show that delinquency is on the increase among youths between the ages of 17 to 19.

Somehow the community, the home, and the school have failed to supply the needs of these boys and girls. There is need of achievement among children. At the present time the grade division in the schools is all wrong. All the bright ones become bored because they have not enough to do; the dull ones fall behind, he said.

But no matter how dull a child may be, he should be given encouragement and praise for his efforts, and all need to retain a sense of achievement. Children also need freedom to do as they please, but most of their mistakes are unintentional; therefore, having acknowledged their faults, they need to feel forgiven.

Children also have a need for sharing and a sense of responsibility, he concluded.

Mrs. R.S. MacDonald reported on the semi-annual meeting of the P.E.I. Home and School Association.

Richard Hennessey, who presided over the meeting, reminded the membership of the annual penny auction to be held on Feb. 7 in conjunction with the next regular monthly meeting.

Retarded Children To Have Boy Scout Troop Organized

The success of Boy Scout groups among handicapped children was the topic dealt with by Jack Rawek as guest speaker for the January monthly meeting of the Charlottetown Branch of the Retarded Children's Association.

Mr. Rawek, assistant district commissioner for the Boy Scouts of Charlottetown and a member of the Lions Club, showed his interest in forming a Boy Scout group of retarded children.

He cited the example of one boy confined to a wheelchair who travelled around the hospital in his chair in order to be eligible for the hike required of a Boy Scout. It took him three years to reach his goal.

Mr. Rawek also formed a scout group at the rehabilitation centre, and two of the boys there are now a leader and assistant leader.

A committee of members was formed to help in forming a Boy Scout group. One member donated $25 to get the group underway.

Mrs. Wendell Wedg informed the members that the new building at Riverside which should be ready sometime in February. Four couples have
