Treatment of Young Lambs.

The first thing in the way of attention a young lamb wants is to see that the ewe's teats are free from all obstruction, says The American Sheep Breeder. The wool about the udder should be clipped off and the flow of milk started by the fingers, so that the lamb can get its food without difficulty. Some ewes, especially the young ones with their first lambs, will be disinclined to permit the lambs to suck and by restlessness prevent them. This, of course, is equivalent to the loss of the lamb. Such ewes must be restrained in some way, the easiest being to inclose the refractory animal in a narrow pen of laths or in a small stanchion, while the lamb gets its meal. A few times will be sufficient to subdue the ewe and make the lamb safe. Another matter that needs immediate attention is the clearing of the annus, which is apt to be clogged up by adhesive excrement by which the discharges are prevented, and, of course, this is fatal to the lamb in a short time. It is an easy thing to loosen the hard crust and separate the adhesion of it to the wool. In some cases when this has been neglected for two or three days the opening of the bowel will be attended by a copious discharge which by its volume will show how great a detriment and inconvenience it has been to the young lamb. To be successful, a shepherd must be well supplied with untiring vigilance, ample knowledge of his business in even such small details at this, and sufficient painstaking industry and promptitude to set everything right that going wrong, as soon as it happens.

Breed Straight.

Whether breeding draft or road horses, breed the best you can of the class you decide upon. Avoid violent crosses. Don't imagine that you can, as a general rule, succeed in breeding a cross bred animal with the size and weight of a draft horse and the speed and activity of a race horse, nor that by cross breeding you can, ordinarily, get a happy combination of many of the good qualities of both. It may be acknowledged that, occasionally, an individual horse will be found that is an excellent animal, a good general purpose horse, and such a horse may have been the result of cross breeding. But such instances are rare. They are exceptions to the rule. Such crosses usually result in a "weedy," ill proportioned animal, that is fit for neither the one purpose nor the other. Such individuals are, when used for breeding purposes detrimental to breeders. They are not of a fixed type. They are composed of say 50 per cent of each of two incongruous elements, and their progeny in the next generation will generally be disappointing.—E. F. Richman, before Iowa Institute.

Weaning Young Pigs.

Almost all pigs are more or less stunted when it comes time to wean them from the dam. The only remedy to prevent this is to accustom the pigs early to eat a little milk, which may be given to them when they are 3 weeks old. This is a good thing for the sow also, as the pigs will not tug at her teats so ravenously and will gradually begin to wean themselves. If any are runts, it is a good plan to let these suckle the dam one or two weeks after the thrifty pigs have been taken off.

Beef Bulls.

The Texas Stockman says: The demand for pure bred bulls of the bee breeds still continues, and prices for prime stock will doubtless remain good for several years, as the demand is large and the supply limited.

Amiable Hogs

Different breeds of hogs vary in the degree of their amiability when it comes to handling them so do different animals of the same breed, says A. N. Springer in Land and a Living. Much of their seeming fierceness is due to fear that you will harm them or the brood. Once they have perfect confidence in you, all restiveness will vanish, as a rule, and you can do for them whatever necessity demands. So far as is possible, one should always select pigs to raise for brood sows from a gentle sow. Then their treatment should be of the kindest, no dogs should be allowed to worry them, and they should never be chased about with sticks or clods. They should really be made pets of, and with a little time and trouble it can be done. Begin by rubbing them when eating or drinking, keep this up at intervals until they seem to expect and enjoy it, and the task is about completed.
