This week's player profile: Brian Cameron

Some opponents are left in awe, others are left in soiled underpants. They are both left with the knowledge that they will never try to stop a man with ankles that big again -- it's too much of a risk. The man is of course, Brian Cameron, or "Thunder Ankles", as he is affectionately referred to by his hardwood contemporaries.

Cameron and his overly large caudal joints first appeared on the scene at Morell High School. Teams from out of town arriving at the Tuna Dome would be sure to see the hard-working Cameron shooting around hours before game time -- showing off the skills that would, more often than not, lead the Marlins to a resounding victory in front of the always raucous home-town crowd. Everyone in town, and I mean everyone, would set aside their respective weeknight duties (ie. cow-milking) to see Cameron and his band of chumps (some of whom you may know) defeat yet another bunch of city-boys.

Nowadays, Brian is the starting forward for the Bezerkers, the phenoms of the UPEI Intramural 'B' Basketball League. His deadly accurate three point bombs, and lightning-quick drives to the hoop, not to mention his ankles, are already staples of this young expansion franchise. The hard-working attitude displayed by Cameron during his high school days at Morell is ever present on the floor of the UPEI Sports Centre. After a tough loss to the Court Jesters this past week, Cameron was reportedly seen running through various shooting drills for thirty-eight hours straight, with raw tuna as his only form of sustenance.

This hard work does not go without notice. Team captain Billy McQueen commented, "Hey, I mean, in the event that I'm ever drunk during a game, I know I can pass the ball to Brian and he'll be ready to deliver". Obviously, the man and his ankles are trusted by his team and should be feared by the rest of the league.
