An Ingenious Islander.

(From the Rockland Courier, May 4th)

A short time since we gave a brief description of an invention for the ventilation of boots and shoes, originated by a D. A. McDonald, of this city. Mr. McDonald has just been granted a patent upon his invention. The patent is upon an improvement on boots and shoes, and is allowed "(1st) In a boot or shoe an insole, having a channel on its under side in which is coiled a spring, such insole being perforated to form a communication between such channel and the interior of the boot or shoe, as set forth. (2nd) In a boot or shoe the combination of the perforated insole, the channel between the soles, communicating with a vertical passage within the counter, terminating in an air inlet opening, and a continuous coiled spring; all substantially as described and shown." Of the practical value and utility of this invention there can be no question and it was very highly spoken of by ex-commissioner Gen. Spear, who secured for Mr. McDonald his letters patent. It is a well-known fact that the lack of proper ventilation of the feet is a source of much ill-health. It is claimed that "McDonald's Acme Boot and Shoe Ventilator" will do away with this evil, and not only is it claimed, but demonstrated to be a fact. Perspiring feet with the attendant discomforts may now become a thing of the past. For years there have been efforts made to accomplish this end, but no arrangement has been successfully effected until now. It looks as if the inventor would make a rich thing out of his discovery. Particularly is his patent efficacious in the case of rubber boots, the system of ventilation, by a current of air from the outside flowing to the bottom of the foot, being perfect. In this direction especially has he presumably struck a bonanza. Mr. McDonald applies the invention to all the fine work he turns out at his shop.

On Saturday the McDonald Boot and Shoe Ventilating Company was organized in this city. The following list of officers was chosen: C. F. Kittredge, President; G. W. Berry, Treasurer; C. E. Littlefield, Secretary; and C. F. Kittredge, John S. Case, G. W. Berry, D. A. McDonald, C. E. Littlefield, of Rockland, John C. Levensaler, of Thomaston, John H. Osgood, of Chelsea, Mass., Directors. The capital stock was fixed at $500,000. Immediate steps will be taken to place the invention prominently before the public.

MAGDALEN ISLANDS.—A despatch from Magdalen Islands via Pictou says:—The winter here has been unusually long and severe, and the poor fishermen have suffered a good deal for want of provisions. The seal fishery has proved a total failure. Herring have struck in for some days past and are now plentiful. Only a small fleet of vessels have as yet arrived for this fishery. The coast is now clear of ice, but the weather keeps cold and wet. The schooners Mystery, Ella B., Stella Marie, Marth, and T. W. Smith have arrived from Halifax with merchandise. The steamer Albert, wrecked here last November, has been got afloat during the winter, after a good deal of trouble and expense being incurred upon her. No other wrecks reported.

Emerson's Seventy-Seventh Birth Day.

In commemoration of the seventy seventh anniversary of the birth of Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Literary World devotes twelve pages of its double number to a series of descriptive sketches, critical papers, poems and a two-page bibliography of the Concord Philosopher. Among the contributors are Walt Whitman, George Wm. Curtis, Rev. Dr. Bartol, Prof. Hedge, F. B. Sanborn, John G. Whittier, Lucy Larcom, Margaret J. Preston, Ross Terry Cooke, and E. P. Whipple. The following tributes are given:—

7 NORHAM GARDENS, OXFORD,
19th April, 1880.

The translator of the Upanishads, Meks-hanala-Ra, sends greetings and best wishes to his American Guru, Amarasumi, on his seventy-seventh birth-day, and encloses an extract from an Upanishad, lately discovered:

Old age and decay lay hold of the body, the senses, the memory, the mind—never of the Self, the looker-on.

The Self never grows tired—the body grows tired of supporting the Self.

The Self never grows blind—the windows of the senses become darkened with dust and rain.

The Self never forgets—the inscriptions on the memory fade, and it well that much should be forgotten.

The self never errs—the many wheels of our own small watches grow rusty, but we look up to the eternal dial in the heavens above which remains right forever.

Long may Ralph Waldo Emerson enjoy the influence which superiority gives over mediocrity, and calm resolve ever fleeting passion.

EMERSON: A man whose commanding genius is acknowledged by men of genius in all countries is not so rare as a man who, with such genius, is still more honored and revered by those who know him nearest for spotless purity and righteousness of character.
HENRY W. BELLOWS,
New York, April 23, 1880.

No words of mine can overstate my respect and admiration for the great poet and essayist whose seventy-seventh birthday the literary world does well to honor. Standing, as he does, at the head of our literature, and foremost among the philosophical thinkers of our age, it needs no gift of prophecy to foresee that his reputation will lose nothing by the lapse of time. No living poet of the English-speaking tongue has written verses bearing more distinctly than his the mark of immortality. In his prose works all must recognize his keen insight, wisdom, fine sense of humor, large tolerance, and love of nature in her simplest as well as grandest aspects—an inimitable combination of practical sagacity, profound reflection and mystical intuition. May his days be long in the land.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

R. W. E.

There is a tall gray cliff before mine eyes,
The haughty trees, wind-swept, bow down to it;

Its crest is with the coming day-time lit,
But at its foot the nestling wild-flower lies:
All forest breaths below like incense rise,
And the shy birds around it sing and flirt.

So stoneth he mid men, supremely wise,
Strong, and uplifted, yet aware of all
That Nature hides from common mortal eyes:
The chariest bloom, the moss most fair and small,
The sun-born insect that with night must fall;

The majesty of days that set and rise,
And that deep thought that in the human breast
Holds him for lifelong friend who knows and brings it rest.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple pure remedies, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."
