International Night Observed By S'side Club

International night was observed by the Summerside Business and Professional Women's Club at the February dinner meeting on Wednesday. The meeting opened with the singing of the emblemic grace.

Following the dinner an enjoyable sing-song was held before the business period. Miss Helen Schurman, the president, explained the meaning of the emblemic grace. The centre candle represented the United States, the oldest and strongest federation, formed in 1919. A candle was lit for the International Federation formed in 1930, and a candle for the countries who are now back after being snuffed out during the war. The names of these countries were read by Miss Mountain.

After the roll call and minutes, reports were given by the various committees. Letters of congratulation to the Summerside club were read from clubs in Coburg and Meadowdale, Ontario; Skowhegan, Maine; Halifax, N.S.; Three Rivers, P.Q.; and Fredericton, N.B.

Miss Edith Inman, assisted by club members, explained the meaning of the emblem. Miss Connie Enman and Miss Jean Nicholson gave very interesting talks on the aims and organization of the United Nations.

Mrs. Taylor was appointed as representative of the employment conditions committee. The members of the club contributed to the fund to be sent to Dame Caroline Haslett of London, England, for the relief of members of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, who have suffered from the recent floods.

The meeting closed with the singing of "The Queen." -S

Let's Talk It Over

There is a story in one of the school readers about two young Indians who quarrelled over which way a certain stream flowed. They were backed up by their respective relatives, and the argument began to assume serious proportions. They finally decided to see who was right by putting a feather into the stream, and seeing which way it would go. But the relatives of one went down to the water's edge, and blew on the feather, respectively, to make it go the way their champion had said the stream flowed. The relatives of the other Indian blew the feather the opposite way, and so the argument wasn't settled after all.

It seems that a great many of us today are "feather blowers." We peruse arguments for and against certain controversial subjects, and read, largely between the lines, the verdict which we wanted to find before we started to examine the discussion. That is, we pounce on, and magnify the arguments that are in line with our pre-conceived ideas, and minimize those which disagree with us.

Recently, a debate was carried on in a widely circulated magazine as to the relative merits of modern and traditional teaching techniques. The article was pointed out to us by an ardent proponent of the old methods, who felt that, in the debate, the traditional system had triumphed. Alas, we, who lean rather strongly towards modern methods, couldn't see it that way at all. It was very clear to us that the exponent of traditional schools had been rather badly mauled in the exchange of opinions.

To us, it seemed that the gentleman who defended the traditional method had depended too much on men's opinions. Opinions of men imposing a scholastic stature, the grant you, but opinions, for the most part, not backed up by any kind of argument. This excerpt, for example: "He included Latin, because in no other way, he thinks, can one be so sure of learning proper English." Do you get the idea? The great man "thinks." No attempt to defend the opinion; just an "ipse dixit" from an educational leader. The trouble with accepting the opinion of an educational giant, just because he is a giant, is that you can always find another intellectual Goliath with a diametrically opposite opinion.

In contrast to this, an excerpt from the other side: "Between 1933 and 1941 in the United States, 265 colleges and universities agreed to accept graduates of 30 secondary schools which had adopted modern teaching methods. These were paired with graduates of traditional schools. 'Experimental' students gained higher averages in all subjects except foreign languages, and higher over-all averages. They were more often judged precise, systematic, objective in their thinking, possessed greater intellectual curiosity and drive, to be more resourceful in meeting new situations." They wrote more, talked more, took a livelier interest in campus political and social problems. They attended more dances, and had more dates." There! We're all out of breath from blowing that feather in the direction we think the educational river should flow.

Excavation Work For Federal Bldg. At Kensington

Excavation work is now under way for the construction of Kensington's new federal building. The contractors, M. F. Schurman Co., Ltd, plan to proceed with the work, weather permitting and it is hoped to have the building completed in 1953.

Mr. Byron Crockett has been appointed foreman on the job and Mr. Byron MacLeod is the engineer and it is the intention to use local labor as much as possible.

The new building will be located at the intersection of the roads leading to Summerside and Charlottetown and will be a fine improvement to this progressive town. -S

Sailor Misses Daily Rum Ration

LONDON, (AP) - A one-time killik bunting tosser Friday told Britain's newest admiral the best thing in the Royal Navy is the daily ration of rum.

The admiral was the Duke of Edinburgh, out on an eight-hour swing through flood-stricken east-coast areas.

One of the men he met was 34-year-old Eric Maxwell, now a fish-monger, who introduced himself as a former killik bunting tosser.

"What do you miss about the Navy?" asked the Duke, without blinking an eye.

Said Maxwell: "One thing only - the rum."

The Duke, a frigate commander recently made an admiral by his wife, the Queen, knew all about the killik bunting tosser stuff. It's naval slang for leading signalman.

Flogging Bill Is Defeated

LONDON, (Reuters) - The House of Commons has rejected a privately-sponsored bill which would attempt to defend the opinion-grant you, but opinions, for the most part, not backed up by any kind of argument. This excerpt, for example: "He included Latin, because in no other way, he thinks, can one be so sure of learning proper English." Do you get the idea? The great man "thinks." No attempt to defend the opinion; just an "ipse dixit" from an educational leader. The trouble with accepting the opinion of an educational giant, just because he is a giant, is that you can always find another intellectual Goliath with a diametrically opposite opinion.

Home Secretary Sir David Maxwell Fyfe said the return of flogging to answer for 50 Conservative members called for application of the switches not only for robberies but for all violent crimes.

Lord Chief Justice Goddard spearheaded a public outcry for return of flogging, by declaring the current crime wave should be answered with a "thundering good larping" for offenders.

Goddard, who rallied the support of most judges for the bill, said many old people are "terrified" to answer a knock at the front door at night" because of increase in crimes.

Before 1948, courts could order flogging for robbery with violence. A bill introduced by 50 Conservative members called for application of the switches not only for robberies but for all violent crimes.

Italy Orders U. S. Clergyman Out of Country

NAPLES, (AP) - The Italian government has ordered Rev. Anthony Callandro, director of the American-financed Evangelical Biblical Institute here to quit Italian soil immediately.

Italian police handed Mr. Callandro notification Friday that he must leave Italy. De Gasperi's office had refused his appeal to the premier to continue his work.

Callandro, 54, has headed his institute since 1948. It is sponsored by the Evangelical churches in the United States and is non-denominational.

The order was the latest incident in continued strife between the government of Roman Catholic Italy and several U.S.-financed Evangelical groups.

Mr. Callandro said his wife were giving him a hard time last January to leave Italy. He appealed to the Premier.

Police handed him a reply Friday from the premier's office which said De Gasperi has not been "winning" that permission to remain in Italy is rejected and that Mr. Callandro must leave immediately.

"But lots of people rather admire us - I think," said Valerie.

Pope Intervened On Behalf of Rosenbergs

VATICAN CITY, (AP) - The Pope intervened in Washington last December in behalf of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the convicted atomic spies whom President Eisenhower has since refused to save from the electric chair, Roman Catholic Church sources said Friday.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano announced that the Pontiff stepped in as an act of mercy "insofar as it was permitted him by the lack of every official relation with the competent United States government authorities."

The newspaper made it plain that the Pope's action was being revealed because of insinuations in the Communist press, loud in denunciation of the death sentences, that he was not interested in the Rosenbergs' fate.

But it gave no details as to how or when the Pope acted on behalf of the couple, Jewish natives of New York.

The marriage of Marion Louise, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Delaney, North Tryon, to George Arthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith, Summerside, was solemnized at the North Tryon Presbyterian Church on Wednesday, February 11th at 4 p.m.

Rev. Donald MacKay, Summerside, performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Peter MacDonald, Charlottetown, played the wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and looked charming in a powder blue wool gabardine suit with pink feather hat and navy accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Bennie Grady, sister of the groom, as matron of honor, was attired in a coffee brown gabardine suit with brown accessories and corsage of white carnations.

The groom was supported by Mr. Bennie Grady, Summerside, and the ushers were Mr. Walter Bowness and Mr. Stanley Delaney.

The bride's mother chose a dress of powder grey crepe with navy and grey hat and a shoulder spray of white carnations, while the groom's mother wore a dove grey suit with navy straw hat and a corsage of pink carnations.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a buffet luncheon was served to the immediate friends and families.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth, centered with three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom flanked with lighted tapers. The dining room was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bells. Mrs. Stanley Delaney cut the loaves, Mrs. Walter Bowness and Mr. Hammond Bowness, sister of the bride, presided over the tea cups, while the Misses Helen Howatt, Lois MacDonald and Pauline Johnson assisted in serving.
